Carol Channing Credits TV For Broadway Resurgence

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

Broadway is booming and one of its outstanding stars gives television the credit.

"People are so saturated with television, they're now turning to live entertainment," Carol Channing said at an exclusive interview Wednesday.

Miss Channing, in Lincoln as part of a benefit for the Lincoln Children's Zoo, co-sponsored by First Federal Savings and Loan and Hovland-Swanson, said that people would rather see what happens when entertainers "really talk to an audience" as opposed to seeing them on a television screen.

'All Full Houses'

Having just closed on Broadway in the smash production of "Lorelei," Miss Channing said that there were about a dozen other musicals on Broadway simultaneously and "we all played to full houses."

"It's never been like that," she said, noting that in past years there were only three or four musicals on Broadway simultaneously.

Strongly encouraging young theatre hopefuls to complete their education,

Miss Channing said those who want to go into show business "should stay home and keep working."

"It's the last time you're allowed to fail," she said.

Jobless Four Years

Noting that she got her start as a student at Bennington College where she was a drama and dance major, she said she got in a Broadway production but when it closed, "I spent the next four years looking for a job."

"If you want to be in show business, just do it — don't tell anyone," she said, encouraging participation in local theatres.

Showing enthusiasm over the Birdcage Theatre at the Children's Zoo, Miss Channing indicated that young talent is where the "Big Time" starts.

Pointing to her pantomimes, dancing, "funny comments" on personalities and impressions of people, the charming star of practically every medium of show business said:

"I'm doing the same type of work I did in the fourth grade."

Not Sudden Change

She emphasized that one doesn't "suddenly do this" after becoming an adult.

Although Thursday night's benefit fashion show at Pershing Auditorium will be Miss Channing's first Lincoln performance, she is not a stranger to Nebraska or its history.

She said her mother, Adelaide Ottman Glaser, was born in Lincoln of a German-speaking family, and Miss Channing's husband, television producer-writer Charles Lowe, is a native Nebraskan.

Nebraska Pioneers

"We used to visit Steele City every year where my husband's mother lived until her death about a year ago," Miss Channing said, adding that his family were Nebraska pioneers.

According to Lowe, his grandparents, Charles and Louisa Hotze, came from Kentucky in a covered wagon to Nebraska in 1870 and founded Indianola.

"Willa Cather — well-known to all Nebraskans — was a great family friend," he added.

Miss Channing will both entertain and model at Thursday night's benefit, which will feature all fashions by seven top designers shown recently in New York.

Oil To Cost More . . . Decision Effective Oct. 1

LIBREVILLE, Gabon (AP) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries announced Wednesday it has decided to raise oil prices as of Oct. 1 to compensate for worldwide inflation and the depreciation of the dollar.

A communique issued at the end of OPEC's 44th ministerial conference in the Gabon capital said OPEC will stick to its decision of last December to hold present prices through September. It then added:

"However, in view of increasing inflation, the depreciation of the value of the dollar and the consequent erosion of the real value of the oil revenues of member countries, the conference decided to readjust crude oil prices as from Oct. 1, 1975."

The communique gave no indication of the size of the increase to be sought by the 13 OPEC countries, which control 85 per cent of the oil in world trade. Some of the more militant OPEC members have talked of a 30-35 per cent increase to compensate for inflation. There is no firm evidence that losses due to inflation have been as great as these producers say.

An increase is to be discussed and decided at a special ministerial conference to be convened at OPEC's Vienna headquarters on Sept. 24, 1975.

The ministers rejected demands from some members — reportedly headed by Algeria — to increase oil prices immediately.

They agreed to quote future oil prices in "special drawing rights" instead of U.S. dollars, but they postponed implementation of the decision until Oct. 1 to observe the price freeze.

Conversion to special drawing rights is expected to add three per cent — less than 30 U.S. cents per barrel — to the price of oil in dollar area countries. Special drawing rights (SDRs), are based on the currencies of 16 major industrial nations.

Price increases related to inflation are expected to be substantially larger.

The ministers agreed to include natural gas in the OPEC price structure for the first time and set up a committee of experts to study how this could best be done.

The conference decided to coordinate gas pricing policies of member countries in such a manner as to be in line with OPEC oil pricing policy, taking into account the premium attributable to natural gas due to its specific advantages," the communique said.

The ministers also decided to coordinate marketing policies of the national oil companies of member countries.

Mohamed Yaganeh, governor of Iran's central bank, told newsmen OPEC prices would be converted into SDRs "at the existing rate" on Oct. 1. This meant OPEC will convert its prices into SDRs as a safeguard against possible future devaluation of the dollar, but will make no attempt to recover losses incurred through devaluation prior to Sept. 30, 1975.

The ministers scheduled a special meeting for Sept. 24 to discuss how to make good the larger losses they claim from world inflation since the price freeze went into effect.

Yaganeh said at the start of the three-day meeting that oil producing countries are now paying 35 per cent more for their imports from industrialized countries than they were in 1973, and that oil prices must be raised by the same proportion.

The ministers avoided any direct reference to new moves toward a dialogue with the oil importing countries. A preparatory meeting for such a dialogue collapsed in Paris in April.

Postage To Be Raised Regardless

NEW YORK (AP) — Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bialer served notice Wednesday that the Postal Service will boost rates on its own terms later this year regardless of whether the contrary recommendations of an administrative judge are implemented in the meantime.

Bialer lambasted Judge Seymour Wenner's plan, now pending before the Postal Rate Commission, as "no good for anyone." Wenner's proposal would reduce first-class postage from 10 cents to 8.5 cents, while sharply increasing the rates in other classes.

Even if the commission adopts Wenner's proposals, said Bialer, the Postal Service will exercise its option to set new "temporary" rates after a 90-day waiting period. Without being specific, he indicated that would mean an over-all increase, but one adjusted to coincide more closely to the existing class structure.

In Washington, a spokesman for Bialer noted that the temporary rate authority for the Postal Service limits increases in any class to 33 per cent. "So presuming the commission drops first class to 8.5 or 9 cents, that would mean we'd be talking about 12 cents," he said. But unlike Wenner, "We certainly wouldn't be looking for huge increases . . . and third or fourth class."

Postage rates now in effect are temporary rates set by the Postal Service nearly two years ago while the commission considers its request for a permanent rate increase. The commission is scheduled to decide on the new permanent rates within weeks.

But whatever the new rates are, declared Bialer in an address to the New York Postal Customers Council. "As soon as they are established, we will file a new case. Ninety days after filing, we will implement new temporary rates."

Wenner's proposal is aimed at making bulk mail self-supporting through large hikes in second, third and fourth classes. At the same time, first-class rates would be reduced to eliminate the profit now used to subsidize "other" classes.

But last, said Bialer, flies in the face of a congressional mandate to soften the impact of rate increases upon the business community.

The Wenner recommendations would result not in a reduction but in substantial redistribution of costs of postal services, driving away some of the volume mailers who help make inexpensive, universal mail service possible," Bialer said.

"The result would soon be higher rates for everyone — the total bill for postal services will still have to be paid by more than 200 million Americans."

On another matter, Bialer said the Central Intelligence Agency no longer has easy access to the U.S. mail. He said the Postal Service now "will not agree to the CIA opening any mail unless it has been court-approved and a search warrant issued."

From 1953 to 1973, the Rockefeller Commission reported Tuesday, the CIA intercepted mail between the United States and the Soviet Union, handling up to 4.3 million pieces of mail a year and opening as many as 13,000 letters a year.

Dyas May Run For Senate

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

In an abrupt and sudden switch of plans, Hess Dyas has told close political associates that he will probably be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate next year.

Dyas had been expected to undertake a second bid for the First District congressional seat held by Republican Rep. Charles Thone.

But he now has his eye on the Senate seat being vacated by Republican Sen. Roman Hruska — assuming Gov. J. James Exon sticks to his decision not to enter the senatorial sweepstakes.

Wide Open Race

As a close contender in 1974

(he lost to Thone by about 10,000 votes), Dyas had been considered a shoo-in for the Democratic nomination once again.

Contacted by The Star, Dyas confirmed that he is giving the Senate contest "some consideration."

But it will be several months before he makes "any public decision," he said.

'Not Even Considered'

"Up until recently, I had not even considered the Senate race. I was thinking only in terms of the First District."

"But at this point, I'm not as definite about it as I once was. I plan to explore the question further in the next few months."

In any event, Dyas said, he would forego consideration of a Senate race if Exon decided to seek the Democratic nomination.

Dyas, 38, was Democratic state chairman from 1970 to 1974.

Best Financed

His 1974 congressional bid was the best organized and most generously financed Democratic campaign for a House seat in state history.

Dyas is now an executive associate with Selection Research Inc., of Lincoln.

Although a number of possibilities have been mentioned, the Democratic picture in next year's Senate race remains blurred.

State Sen. Jules Burbach of Crofton told The Associated Press Wednesday that he has not ruled out a possible candidacy.

But State Sen. Frank Lewis of Bellevue crossed his name off the list in a separate interview with The Star.

DYAS . . . hasn't decided yet.

Common Cause Will Lead Initiative Petition Campaign

After weeks of debate, Common Cause of Nebraska has decided to proceed with an initiative petition drive to write a new state law regulating officeholders, candidates and lobbyists.

The decision came at this week's meeting of the citizen organization's program action committee.

Other groups are being invited to participate in what will be called the Coalition for Open Government.

The Sierra Club has already decided to join in the effort and another dozen organizations are considering the proposal, according to Liga Dambro of Omaha, Common Cause's program action committee chairperson and communications coordinator.

General Tightening

The initiated law would tighten disclosure requirements for lobbyists, impose campaign spending limits, tighten restrictions on conflicts of interest by officeholders and refine open meetings provisions.

An independent citizens enforcement commission would oversee financial disclosures by officeholders, candidates and lobbyists.

If the coalition can obtain some 32,000 valid signatures on petitions prior to July of 1976, the proposal would go before the people for their consideration that November.

It has been two decades since a proposed law was placed before the people by initiative petitions. That measure, proposing a ton-mile motor vehicle tax, was rejected in 1956.

Last Done In 1930

Nebraskans last wrote a law by initiative in 1930.

Nebraska is one of 21 states in which the people can legislate by initiative.

This week's decision to proceed, Ms. Dambro said, resulted largely from the 1975 Legislature's refusal to enact a bill proposing fuller disclosure of lobbying activities.

The open government proposals in the initiative effort could take 20 years to obtain through legislative action, Ms. Dambro said.

Patience Strained

"Some of us do not have a patience span quite that long," she noted.

The coalition will use the next two months to seek suggestions improving the language of its proposals, she said.

Five hundred copies of the proposed statute will be distributed statewide during the next 10 days, along with a request for proposed revisions.

An August 1 meeting will decide what refinements, if any, are needed.

Petitions will be circulated by volunteers. Ms. Dambro said, with a goal of 50,000 signatures.

The initiative's lobbying proposal would require lobbyists to disclose their income from lobbying activities, a provision which led to the defeat of the 1975 legislative bill sponsored by Sen. John Cavanaugh III of Omaha.

The conflict of interest proposal would require annual detailed disclosure of public officials' economic interests.

Common Cause, which began organizing in Nebraska in 1972, now has about 1,000 members.

Church To Dig Deeper On CIA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wrongdoing by the Central Intelligence Agency cited in the Rockefeller Commission's report "is in all likelihood just the tip of the iceberg," Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said Wednesday.

But Church, chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, stressed that he was not accusing the commission of a cover-up.

He noted that the commission's 300-page report is limited to domestic activities and said his committee "must probe much deeper."

Church said the Senate committee must also examine the entire area of foreign covert operations including allegations that the CIA has been involved, directly or indirectly, in assassination plots directed against foreign leaders.

Church said he agrees with many of the commission's recommendations but said that the report should have proposed specific criminal penalties for future wrongdoing.

"When they say that the president ought not in the future to ask the CIA to engage in wrongdoing or illegal activities or when they say the CIA director ought not to do so, I think that that's clearly insufficient," Church told reporters following a closed committee session.

Meanwhile, Sens. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., and Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said they would press for adoption of a resolution to have a permanent House-Senate oversight committee police the entire intelligence-law enforcement community.

And White House Press Secretary said President Ford would await recommendations from key advisers before deciding "what action to take administratively and what legislation might be proposed" in an effort to prevent further illegal activity by the CIA.

He said the President was drafting requests for comments and recommendations based on the commission report from Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, Secretary of the Treasury William E. Simon, Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi and CIA Director William E. Colby.

Levi delayed most procedural decisions until he receives the Rockefeller Commission's documentary evidence supporting the allegation of illegal domestic CIA activities.

Justice Department spokesman Robert Havel said Wednesday that "all the documentation the commission has is coming over." He described it as "a vast amount of material."

As for the general course Levi will pursue, Havel said, "It's going to be handled in a regular investigatory manner."

Continuing its investigation of alleged CIA murder plots, the 11-member Senate Intelligence Committee heard testimony for a second day Wednesday from Richard Bissell, who headed the CIA's "dirty tricks" department at the time of the 1961 Bay of Pigs invasion.

Bissell, who declined to speak with reporters, has acknowledged previously the existence of a contingent plan involving underworld figures John Roselli and Sam Giancana to kill Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

Church refused to discuss Bissell's testimony but announced that the committee had voted unanimously to grant limited immunity from prosecution to Robert A. Maheu, a former aide to billionaire Howard Hughes Maheu, who had been identified in news reports as the liaison between the CIA and the two crime figures, invoked the Fifth Amendment when he appeared before the committee Monday.

Church made clear he could not comply with President Ford's reported desire to wind up all probes of the CIA by September.

Church said administration officials had assured the committee that some of the evidence regarding assassination gathered both by the Rockefeller Commission and the White House would be sent to the committee by Monday.

In other developments — Colby refused to comment on the commission's report other than to say he would not endorse the commission's recommendation that part of the CIA budget be made public.

Budget Director James T. Lynn said a total of $245,000 was spent on the Rockefeller Commission.

KINGHAMMER . . . posts 'for sale' sign after working just three days in past 10 months.

Wisconsin Carpenter Forced To Sell House

WEST ALLIS, Wis. (AP) — "For sale, going on welfare," reads the plywood sign on Donald Kinghammer's suburban home.

The 40-year-old carpenter, who has worked only three days in the past 10 months, says a lack of construction jobs and the loss of his unemployment benefits prompted the sign.

The hand-lettered sign went up Saturday on the front wall of Kinghammer's small, one-story home in West Allis, an older, semi-industrial suburb bordering Milwaukee's west side.

It had brought several offers by midweek, but none for the $20,000 Kinghammer said he wants for the house.

"I need all the money I can get out of it," he explained Wednesday.

Kinghammer was laid off last September from his job with Urban America, Inc. — the first time in 15 years he had been without work as a carpenter.

He collected $108 a week unemployment until April, when we worked for three days for a contractor. He left the job in a dispute over pay, and the unemployment checks stopped.

The state has scheduled a hearing for Thursday to determine whether his unemployment benefits should be resumed.

Kinghammer, who specialized in building houses when he was working, has extensively remodeled the house during the idle hours since his layoff last September. He had to stop recently when he ran out of money for building supplies.

With no unemployment checks coming in, his wife's income from cleaning jobs at a nursing home has not been sufficient to support them, Kinghammer said.

"I think it's going to get worse," he added. There is little demand for carpenters, he said, and the jobs that are available often go to younger men.

"They just take your name down and that's the last you hear of it," he said.

Hostages Revolt; Prisoners Caught

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (AP) — An uprising by hostages and an assault by the prison's tactical squad Wednesday ended a 41-hour siege at British Columbia Penitentiary. One woman hostage was killed in the gunfire that accompanied the guards' assault, officials said.

One of the three life term inmates who had held 15 hostages in a small storage vault since Monday was wounded and another received superficial injuries, officials said. None of the 14 surviving hostages was injured.

Mary Steinhauser, 32, a prison social worker, died of two gunshot wounds, Coroner Douglas Jack said.

Intermediaries who met with the inmates during the siege said the prisoners had knives, but no guns. Prison guards fired eight shots during their assault, said Rod Keary, New Westminster police chief.

Prison officials had no comment on how Miss Steinhauser died.

The siege began when the three inmates — two convicted of murder and the third of attempted murder — scheduled simultaneous interviews in the prison's classification office. They seized the hostages, holed up in a 15-by-15-foot storage vault and demanded a helicopter to ferry them to an airport for a flight to a foreign country.

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau was briefed on the situation and Canadian officials said they did contact some foreign countries. However, no offer to met the inmates' demand was ever made.

The inmates were identified as Andy Bruce, 26, of North Vancouver, B.C., serving life for murder; Claire Wilson, 25, of Campbell River, B.C., serving life for attempted murder and escape, and Douglas Lucas, 20 of Winnipeg, serving life for murder.

One of the intermediaries who had met with the inmates, Vancouver radio newsmen Gary Bannerman, related the story of the hostage uprising from accounts by two of the hostages and prison officials.

The hostages decided to make a break by themselves after the intermediaries could offer no optimism in negotiations with the inmates. Fourteen of the hostages were in the vault room with one of the inmates while the other two inmates held Miss Steinhauser at knifepoint outside.

"When it became obvious that two of the three inmates (Lucas) and (Bruce) were becoming sloppy (outside) and Claire Wilson was collapsed from demerol (a drug) use and exhaustion, they decided to make their move," Bannerman said.

"One chap (a hostage) picked up a heavy metal tripod from a shelf in the vault and planned to strike Lucas on the head, knocking him unconscious. The plan then called for the hostages to rush out of the room and separate Miss Steinhauser from the other inmates," Bannerman added.

Guards stormed the vault area after the hostages attacked their captors, prison officials said.

House Swings Ax On 23-Cent Gas Tax Hike

Washington (AP) — A proposed 23-cent hike in the federal tax on a gallon of gasoline, the most hotly contested part of the comprehensive energy tax and tariff bill, was killed by the House Wednesday night.

The vote was 208 to 187.

The House chopped 20 cents off the proposal, which many Democrats in Congress hoped to present as the gasoline tax portion of their alternative to President Ford's energy program.

Later, the House finished off the proposal with the vote wiping out the remaining three cents.

In a final plea for support of the gasoline tax hike, House Democratic Leader Thomas P. O'Neill of Massachusetts shouted to his colleagues that this was "a question of whether we have the guts to stand up and vote for the future of America."

O'Neill, declared: "There is a crisis facing this country and I hope we have the courage to vote for your kids, your kids' kids, for the future of America."

The bill had been prepared for the House by its Democratic-dominated Ways and Means Committee.

In his last appeal for action — urging support of at least the three cents a gallon tax increase — Committee Chairman Al Ullman called for his colleagues to "leave this minimal amount in the bill that's so important to developing energy resources."

The 20 cents portion was rejected by the House, 345-72, before it continued work on the remaining parts of the gasoline tax-hiking section of the bill.

Earlier, the House handed Democratic backers of the bill a defeat by voting to raise oil import quotas.

'DO IT QUICK' . . . Hale asks job be ended.

Official Wants Job Abolished

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jubal Hale, the federal bureaucrat who has spent four years listening to Beethoven records, urged Congress Wednesday to abolish his $19,693-a-year job.

"I want you to do it as quick as you can," Hale told a Senate committee considering a bill by Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., to eliminate the Federal Metal and Nonmetallic Safety Board of Review.

The board was set up in 1971 to hear appeals from mine operators ordered to shut down by the Interior Department, but it has never heard an appeal.

Hale is the board's executive secretary.

Percy said, "There has never been a clearer case for any one particular bureaucratic reform as the abolition of this review board."

He praised Hale for his candor. "Your attitude is refreshing," he said.

Hale noted the board each year has sent a one-page report to Congress saying it had nothing to do.

"There's an element of sardonic humor in these reports," Percy said.

Hale recently said in an interview that he has so little to do that he spends nearly all his time listening to Beethoven records and reading.

Percy asked him, "Is there any reason to continue the board other than to improve your cultural life by listening to Beethoven records?"

Hale responded: "I don't think you've got any choice but to abolish the board. But you've got to substitute something in its place."

An Interior Department official agreed that the board must go. James R. Richards, director of the Office of Hearings and Appeals, said: "The board doesn't serve any useful function. We recommend that it be abolished."

Rep. Ken Hyde, D-W.Va., who has introduced a similar bill to abolish the board in the House, told the Senate Government Operations Committee, "I am shocked at the failure of either Congress or the President to act to do away with this board."

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., the committee chairman, said he would support the legislation to abolish the board.

New York — In New York City to receive an award from the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, Betty Ford singled out Martha Graham, her former dance teacher, as "my very, very favorite person." The First Lady prolonged her New York visit to hold her first reunion with Miss Graham since she had studied and danced with her in the late 1930s.

Panel Praised, Criticized

Washington — The Washington official who provided much of the basic information for the initial account by The New York Times of domestic spying, last December, has praised the Rockefeller Commission for compiling what he termed an "exhaustive" report on the Central Intelligence Agency's illegal activities. However, the official, speaking under the continued guarantee of anonymity, sharply criticized the commission's recommendations as being too weak and not providing for explicit statutory prohibition for future wrongdoing.

Governors: Save Fuel Voluntarily

New Orleans (UPI) — The nation's governors Wednesday called for a massive voluntary campaign to conserve energy.

They also urged the federal government to use changes in monetary policy, tax cuts, public works spending, and revenue sharing bonuses to stem the recession and curb unemployment.

In a whirlwind finish to the 67th annual National Governors Conference, the governors approved a rash of resolutions dealing with virtually every domestic problem facing the nation.

They also elected Iowa's Republican Gov. Robert Ray, a 46-year-old second term, as their new chairman, succeeding Utah's Democratic Gov. Calvin Rampton.

The governors adopted a mildly worded resolution, 37 to 2, favoring voluntary conservation as the key to the energy crisis but said, "If voluntary conduct does not meet the needs of society, government should then consider an appropriate mix of tax incentives and regulation."

In effect, this was a reversal of a resolution adopted Tuesday in which the governors went on record as opposing price increases as a means of reducing consumption but demanded a share of the revenues if Congress increases gasoline taxes anyway.

The Tax Board's Loner

Why the lone hold-out?

By a 4-1 vote last week the State Board of Equalization boosted the state individual income tax rate from 10% of the federal liability to 12%, the ceiling placed on the state rate by the Legislature for calendar 1975.

Even that 20% hike in the individual income tax rate, retroactive to Jan. 1, coupled with an increase in the corporate income tax from 2.75% to 3.3%, may not produce enough revenue to meet expenditures through the coming fiscal year, according to State Tax Commissioner William Peters. Peters thinks the situation can be handled through the remainder of 1975 at the 12% rate, but if his projected revenue-expense figures hold true, he sees a tax increase again in 1976 as a must.

Two of the three Republican members of the usually partisan equalization board were apparently in agreement with the two Democrats that the revenue picture at best looks uncertain and that appropriations authorized during the last session of the Legislature mandated the hike in the rate from 10% to 12%. Secretary of State Allen J. Beermann and State Auditor Ray A. C. Johnson, both Republicans, joined Democrats Peters and Gov. Jim Exon in adopting the 12% rate.

The lone dissenting vote was cast by State Treasurer Frank Marsh, the veteran elected official who in the past has been secretary of state and lieutenant governor. The nay vote was a most curious performance on Marsh's part.

Because, prior to voting "no" on the 12% motion, Marsh did not argue against going up to the ceiling, nor did he propose 11% or 10% motions.

Only afterwards did Marsh offer the explanation that "there are substantial indications the state could have gone with 11%." Asked why he did not speak against the 12% motion or make his own motion, Marsh said, "I thought it (the 12% motion) would fail."

That's not an answer, of course — it's an excuse. And a poor one.

What "substantial indications" did Marsh see? Certainly they were not contained in the tax commissioner's revenue projections or in the authorized expenditures for the coming fiscal year. Peters would have preferred 13% to be on the safe side but had to stick with the 12% rate because of the Unicameral-ordered ceiling. What did Marsh see that his two Republican colleagues, who voted for 12%, failed to see? Nobody can be certain, because Marsh kept his reasoning to himself.

We can say with certainty that keeping taxes as low as possible is a popular political position. In absence of any compelling arguments from Marsh as to the efficacy of an 11% rate, or a hold-the-line 10% rate, it is fair to conclude that Marsh was holding out against 12% for his political enrichment. At least it is fair to conclude he was flirting with politics.

And when you're flirting with politics when the evidence says the books won't balance, you're flirting with irresponsibility.

A Controversial Statement

The editorial statement by Stanley Rosenblatt which The Star reprints today from the journal of the American Judicature Society is a provocative, contentious and startling indictment of the American criminal justice system.

His suggestions for getting a handle on the exploding problem of rising crime against people and property are equally controversial.

The remedies which may be old hat to many serious students of the criminal justice system on the other hand may be shocking to many middle Americans.

The Star agrees in part and disagrees in part with Rosenblatt.

For example, we question the wisdom and the practicality of such statements as "Police should be removed from traffic control altogether . . ." and "Civilians could be trained in short order to enforce traffic laws."

We wonder as a practical political matter whether the concept of regional police departments could ever be realized.

LA VERNA HASSLER

Patchwork Prairie Country

... A NEBRASKA CORNFIELD ... after heavy hail ...

For those farmers who had the opportunity to get all of their crops planted before the rains came, the growing season is now ideal. The sun spurs the growth of young plants these days. All the seedlings have to do is stand and grow, unfurl more tender green leaves and reach for the sun.

There are still some fields of beans and milo that have not been planted but this week should allow time enough for those crops. With all of the row crops making fine green lines through the fields and the wheat heading out, bending slightly under the weight, the countryside indeed looks fruitful and ample.

With the hail and winds that have been skirting our area, every farmer is aware that some morning he may awaken to fields of wheat flattened by the elements and corn stripped of its leaves.

Some fields of hay that were cut earlier have been a problem. Just as the hay had dried enough to put up, the rains would come again . . . rain and sun, almost ready . . . more rain and sun.

While The Farmer's crop have been growing, my garden has been maturing, too. Never have I had a nicer garden, although the first beets I planted somehow never came through the ground. The second planting spurted beets through every inch and now they stand like red flags

The lettuce is curly and green, making a picture of color, lines and shape that would vie with any artist's work on canvas.

Surprisingly enough, the rabbits have not bothered the garden this year. However, there is something eating the cabbage leaves. I find no worms on them or other insects so I have come to the conclusion the cut-worms are eating on them during the night or cloudy cool days. I powdered them one day and promptly saw my efforts washed away by the rain during the night.

The cucumbers have not made themselves known as yet but I am waiting for them . . . likewise the squash beetles. The squash beetles attack the stems under the surface of the ground and sometimes overnight, it seems. Once the beetles have burrowed in the stems, the plants are lost.

Picturesque Portraits I would like to frame for the keeping:

A copper-colored young coit rolling in the warm earth, polishing and shaking vigorously until its coat shines like a new penny.

An old man sitting on the shady side of the street, relaxed on a park bench smoking his pipe.

Me, walking past the old gentleman, curious about what his "pipe dreams" might be.

A young kitten, wild as a jungle cat, dashing for its hideaway at the slam of a screen door.

An old gray barn with pigeons crowing in the eaves, softly talking as night approaches.

A slashing spring rain descending upon the meadow, filling the creek-bed, arching the tree-tops into glistening umbrellas.

The drumming of a cock pheasant in an open field, calling attention to his brilliant plumage.

The gray-brown hen sneaking along at the edge of a wheat field ready to dart into the tall green shelter.

An outdoor world of June, country green and moist, odoriferous of damp earth and drying hay fields.

A bowl of crispy garden-fresh lettuce in a bowl on the dinner table . . . every green frilly leaf bristling with vitamins and minerals.

Me, feeling my muscles, deciding I need a big helping of the green crunchy stuff.

GUEST OPINION

By STANLEY ROSENBLATT
(Editor's note: The author, a Miami attorney, is a trial specialist in the tort field. He has written two books).

The crime statistics recently released by the FBI show a continuing and inexorable trend — the increase of lawlessness everywhere (urban, suburban and rural). Approximately one out of fifty serious crimes results in a conviction. This statistic becomes even more incredible when we realize that most crime is never reported to the authorities.

One half of all criminal arrests in the United States are for drunkenness, disorderly conduct, vagrancy and gambling. This preoccupation with victimless crimes is a root cause of our nation's failure to solve real crimes like murder, robbery, rape, aggravated assault and burglary. The simple truth is that crime pays all too well.

Cynics and law violators are created every time a murder or robbery goes unsolved. Any criminal justice system worth its name must be successful in apprehending and punishing criminals. Ours fails to meet this obvious priority.

Because law and politics are intertwined in America we have been conditioned to believe that the criminal law is our primary instrument for establishing desirable patterns of behavior. Consider

Demands Control Of His Destiny

Lincoln, Neb.

Everyone seems to have a beef with the government these days. It is almost impossible to engage in a conversation anywhere with anyone without some sort of complaint about the way government is handling things. The people in government are the most vocal and visible complainers. They are all giving each other hell for handling this wrong, for handling that wrong. When are we going to reach the point that "we, the people" have had too much handling?

I think we are rapidly approaching that point. Our ancestors managed to live their lives without being handled from cradle to grave. "We, the people" are led to believe that freedom is dandy but without government in every nook and cranny, life is impossible.

What can we do about it? I don't know. I was out fishing one afternoon recently with my son, making an effort to find some peace of mind if not some solutions, when a courteous voice from the bank informed that if I had no life-preservers for my son and myself, I should come ashore. I told the officer that we were in our life-preserver, my double-chambered rubber life boat. He said the law reads that my son must have a life-preserver on and one for me must be in the boat. A good idea, maybe, but a lousy law.

I am 36 years old, of sound mind, an American citizen and supposedly a free man. Doesn't that qualify me to make a decision once in awhile? Do I have to be led through life by Big Brother? Does Big Brother have to decide what is safe and what is not safe for me? Does he really care, or is he just responding to an overpowering desire to meddle in my life?

I resent the inference that I have been careless with my son's life. I resent the inference that I am too dumb to decide whether I need a life-preserver. I resent having my fishing interrupted, the fine, and the time I'll have to spend in court. And I DEMAND that this condescending law be removed from the books of my beloved country. I realize that the word "demand" may sound too strong. Especially when I admittedly am not a member of any minority group. But if I do not demand to have control of my own destiny, who will? Big Sister?

Evaluating Legislature

Blair, Neb.

I would like to correct the record. Less than a month before the adjournment of this year's Unicameral, I suggested that this Legislature was shaping up as one of the very few responsible unicameral groups in recent years. Then — whammy! The final, almost amazing and horrendous final 30 days — a mish-mash of the usual irresponsible, almost hysterical actions which, in my opinion, relegated this year's "nuthouse run by its inmates" from head of the class to perhaps one of the very worst of our unicameral groups.

About the only piece of responsible major legislation which survived censure was the failure of the Unicameral by only a whisker to override the governor's veto of the education boondoggle.

Among the freshmen legislators, Warren Swigart of Omaha stood out like a sore thumb. Amongst the old-timers, as usual, "Play-It-Cool" Bill Hasebrook and Tom Kennedy rate high marks. Too many of those remaining should have stayed home. They would not have been missed, including De Camp.

Nebraska citizens are going to have to insist on a constitutional convention if the unicameral concept is to survive the erratic, irresponsible, leaderless unicamerals which get worse every year.

Rabbit vs. Coyote

Beatrice, Neb.

To Mr. Coyote and all of your two-legged emotional friends, let me say that I think I might have a right to life also. I remember when I was very small and you came along sniffing out my mother's nest which she so carefully prepared for our birth and first few weeks life. As you stuck your ugly, vicious, saliva-dripping jaws into our warm nest, my mother barely escaped, leaving us babies to our ravenous appetite. Fortunately for me, there were five of us — but I was the only one to escape. I remember the crunching of my brothers' and sisters' bones as you gulped down their remains, barely tasting the warm blood dripping from their dying bodies.

I sit here tonight in my adopted home — a battered and weak brush pile — afraid to go out and eat because I hear your continued yipping on yonder ridge. I know if you don't get me, you will go after some defenseless pheasant and if that doesn't satisfy you, you will kill and eat some defenseless newborn calf or lamb. They, too, ought to have a right to life, particularly when they are raised for a potential beneficial purpose in life.

In this modern world, you have no purpose or justification. But knowing how sneaky and resourceful you are, you will survive all attempts to eradicate you. I wish I could say the same for us rabbits. There are so few of us now. We are seldom seen out in the country any more.

No, I don't feel sorry for you — you don't live off grass and seeds like we do. You live mostly on living things like us. No, you may have had some part in Mother Nature's plans about 300 to 400 years ago, but you are not needed nor wanted now.

HOPPY COTTONTAIL

all the unenforced and unenforceable laws against adultery, fornication, pornography, drug and drink intake, and prostitution.

The American middle-class must disabuse itself of the dangerous notion that its professed moralistic values can be enforced by police, prosecutors and judges. The law can effectively provide remedies for relatively few wrongs on an interpersonal level (absent the use of force).

There is no criminal justice system in America. There can be no system while amateur police are split into forty thousand separate departments or while harried and politicized deal makers called prosecutors negotiate 90 per cent of their convictions. There can be no system while poorly trained, hack judges know more about getting out the vote than they do about the United States Constitution. In England the average time between arrest and trial is one month; in America the average time is never!

We have never been serious about crime and law enforcement in this country. If we were, the situation would never have been permitted to deteriorate to its present pitiful state. As but one example: the field of traffic regulation occupies a totally disproportionate amount of time and effort by the three basic branches of any criminal justice system — police, prosecutors and judges.

Police should be removed from traffic control altogether, and prosecutors and judges should stop playing at trying traffic offenses. The criminal trial is not an institution meant to deal with millions of petty traffic violations each year. There can be no adversary proceeding when a hearing is expected to take five minutes and where twenty minutes is regarded as an intolerable filibuster.

Civilians could be trained in short order to enforce traffic laws. Speeding, like drunk driving, is a scientific question rather than a judicial one. If a violator refused to stop or otherwise resisted, then the traffic enforcer could summon the police. Policemen should be solving crimes and apprehending criminals and preparing their testimony in important trials; they should not be wasting time waiting to testify about an improper U-turn.

We must come to understand the real function of law as well as its limitations. The law must protect us from others, not from ourselves.

It is self defeating to attempt to regulate purely personal habits. We are extraordinarily slow learners in this country, for certainly our Prohibition debacle should have taught us once and for all that laws are an ineffective weapon in the battle against "immorality."

Hypocritical laws which are selectively enforced actually stimulate the aggrandizement of organized crime and are in themselves a debasing and corrupting influence.

We must abolish all laws against pornography, abortion and consensual sexual acts. We must stop calling acts crimes which have no victims like vagrancy and disorderly conduct. The full panoply of constitutional due process is a luxury we cannot afford for the ordinary trivial offense.

Professionalism and the scientific method must replace politics throughout our entire criminal justice system. We must establish high national standards for the employment of law enforcement personnel. We need regional police departments headed by career administrators.

Reform cannot be the answer. To paraphrase John Dean, "There is a cancer growing on justice and law enforcement." What we must have immediately is devastating structural changes in many of our political institutions and a total divorce of law enforcement from politics.

Waiting For Wilson

LONDON — If you want to understand the British economic problem, all you have to do is come here and look at the prices and read the papers. They make our economic and political dilemmas in the United States look like a temporary inconvenience. For example:

—The Sunday Telegraph reports that General Motors has decided to build a new Vauxhall automobile in Belgium instead of in Britain because of the economic uncertainty in this country.

G.M. has lost about $80 million here in the last six years, and its output per worker in West Germany is about 50% higher than in Britain.

—British railways have agreed to a 27.5% wage increase recommended by the industry's arbitration tribunal, but have insisted that at least 10,000 railwaymen be laid off to make up for the additional cost.

The National Union of Railwaymen says it will call a nationwide strike of its 174,000 employees on June 23 unless it gets a better deal.

—Prime Minister Harold Wilson blames much of the inflation on excessive wage demands, but some of the major unions and left-wing members of his own Labor government reject this analysis and call for more nationalization of British industry, though the nationalized industries on the whole have been adding to the deficit.

—On a more mundane level, with inflation running here at 22% or more, even the workers with their higher pay can't keep up with the prices. A two-ounce tin of Erimore mixture pipe tobacco costs about $2.75, and if you want to be fancy, or are on an expense account, a double room at the Savoy Hotel costs over $90 a night.

even after the non-partisan success of the moderates in the European referendum, is not only grim but melancholy, as if this historic decision meant nothing.

"Once upon a time," the Sunday Times observed, "The British had stiff upper lips. They met triumphs with indifference and setbacks with disdain. Over the years, this famous quality was corrupted, and became instead a uniquely British capacity for regarding every achievement but especially their own, with invincible cynicism. The deadliest sound in England is the steady drip of British boredom."

The British have swallowed so much bad news in recent years that they scarcely recognize good news when they see it.

So the question being thrown at Wilson, even before a weekend rest at Chequers is what is he going to do with his victory, not next week but right now?

Is he going to fight the inflation with an austerity program that will increase unemployment and infuriate the unions, or appease the union leaders and others?

Wilson is being asked whether he is a big enough man to handle his mandate, a national leader or a party manipulator?

President Ford has his difficulties in the United States with inflation and cabinet squabbles over fixing prices on commodities.

His unemployment problem is even more serious than Wilson's but his margin for error, his economy, and his political opposition are easier to handle than Wilson's.

The moderates in both parties here are praising Wilson for his clever piloting of the referendum, and urging him to lead this moderate middle out of the economic wilderness, but at the same time he is being subjected to much more savage criticism than anything Ford has faced in the last six months.

The argument being hurled at him is that the extremists of the right and left have lost, that the rank-and-file union members are much more sensible than their leaders and that there is now an historic chance to break out of the ideological molds of both parties.

"Why cannot the people have what they want?" Bernard Levin asked this week in The Times of London. "That is the question we have to ask, insistently and clamorously . . . Why, in particular, cannot labor voters and trades union members have what they want?"

"There is no lack of honest and moderate men and women among the chief members of the Labor party, and with the inevitable lack of leadership from Mr. Wilson, who will concentrate as usual on his political wheeling-dealing, it is up to them to provide the voice and the inspiration that is needed."

Equally incessant voices from the left are urging him to keep all the cabinet members who opposed him and stick to the policies that have contributed to the crisis, but he puffs on his pipe and informs the British people, who can now hear him live on radio from the House of Commons, that he will make up his mind in time.

Nobody listening to all this can doubt the vitality of British democracy or the boldness of its political and press debate, and it may be a little early to decide that Wilson will go on as before.

He has read the election returns like everybody else, and the inflation and production figures, too, so nothing is "inevitable" here after the referendum.

Wilson has a chance not only to go into Europe but to help lead it, and he might just take it.

Survey Shows Drop In Kissinger Rating

By LOUIS HARRIS
Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's overall job rating fell, while President Ford's went up, as a result of U.S. action in the Mayaguez affair.

Although the people still give Kissinger a positive rating of 56-37%, he has lost 12 percentage points since last March, when he received a 68-26% positive rating, and 29 points since his record high of 85-10% positive in May 1974. President Ford, whose positive rating has climbed from 37 to 50%, now rates only six points less than Kissinger.

The Harris Survey asked a cross section of 1,428 adults nationwide about three weeks ago.

"How would you rate the job Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is doing — excellent, pretty good, only fair or poor?"

KISSINGER OVERALL JOB RATING

March	68	26	6
Dec. 1974	75	19	6

People were then asked to rate Kissinger on specifics of his performance.

X—Not asked in March

The degree to which Kissinger has lost public confidence in all aspects of his work is evident in the rating he receives for his handling of the Vietnam and Cambodian crises, 51-38% negative. For ending troop involvement there, his rating has fallen 12 points since last March. Kissinger was held more accountable for the North Vietnamese takeover than Ford, who received a 49-46% negative rating by the same cross section for his handling of the Indochina war.

Similarly, the public rating of Kissinger's ability to effect a ceasefire in the Middle East has dropped from 58-32% to 49-40% since March.

But the public's most serious criticism of Kissinger is on his ability to get the Communists to keep agreements they make (55-29% negative) and his handling of relations with Congress (46-39% negative). Ironically, Ford, who has been even harsher with Congress than Kissinger, has enjoyed a 10-point rise since last March for handling relations with Congress.

Even though Kissinger's standing on "working for peace in the world" is still positive and well above that given President Ford, his popularity has greatly diminished and he will no longer be able to anticipate instant public support for each of his programs.

Englishman, 42, 'Just Mad About' Mickey Mouse

London (AP) — "I know it sounds ridiculous, but I'm just mad about Mickey Mouse," said a 42-year-old Englishman who paid more than $1,000 for a pile of old comic books.

Hubert Johnson was one of a flock of British funnies fans who took part in hectic bidding at Sotheby's, the dignified London auction house that sold nearly 20,000 items in its first-ever sale of comic books.

Life Begins At Forty:

'Insurance Food' Peddlers Are Using Scare Tactics

By JOANNE FARRIS
QUESTION — "Several of our friends tell us that they have begun buying dehydrated or freeze-dried foods in special packaging.

"The idea apparently is to store these items until expected shortages occur so that they won't have to do without them in the future. Also, they tell me this is a great way to beat inflation for they say these foodstuffs are cheaper now than they will be.

"This reminds me a little of the bomb shelter days of the early 1960s, and I don't feel comfortable about it. Is this a good idea?"

ANSWER — No. More than one enterprising get-rich-quick firm has begun circularizing clubs and groups with particular emphasis on senior citizen organizations using "scare tactics to try and peddle food packages at ridiculous prices.

According to the Pennsylvania Department of Public Welfare, it would appear that these companies are reaping great profits from the thousands of persons thus far frightened into buying their products."

Some of these firms are simply buying cheap food in bulk, repackaging it, and selling it to unsuspecting customers for four or five times its worth. Don't be fooled. These so-called "insurance foods" are neither necessary nor wise to purchase.

If your friends are among those persons who want to squirrel away some foods for an unforeseeable rainy day in the dim distant future I guess no one can stop them, but be forewarned yourself.

Your comment about the bomb shelter days reminds me that I have always wondered when the people who stored a lot of food in their bomb shelters ever got around to using it. Like you, I don't feel particularly comfortable thinking that I'm going to stock up on foods now so that I and my family can enjoy them when others are going hungry.

Unfortunately, many elderly persons have low resistance to scare and hard-sell techniques, and not a few businesses are taking advantage of this fact.

Smart businessmen aware that old persons even with low incomes often have sizable assets, and conscious of the fact that old people are often apprehensive about their futures and their reduced incomes, are devising alluring ways to sell these unwary, frequently over-trusting persons goods and services which they do not need and cannot really afford.

Whenever you get a "pitch addressed to you in glowing terms, full of promises regarding the privileges such a purchase will entitle you to, look out.

Any association which invites you to join, or any company that wants to sell you something because you're a senior citizen should be regarded with healthy skepticism.

You should compare these unsolicited invitations to spend money with similar goods and/or services that you and your friends can purchase from someone reputable with whom you have done business for years.

This is most particularly true with respect to some of the "no examination" insurance policies that are offered to old persons through the mail.

Discuss these with your insurance agent. Frequently you can get better health and life insurance geared to your own needs through your agent.

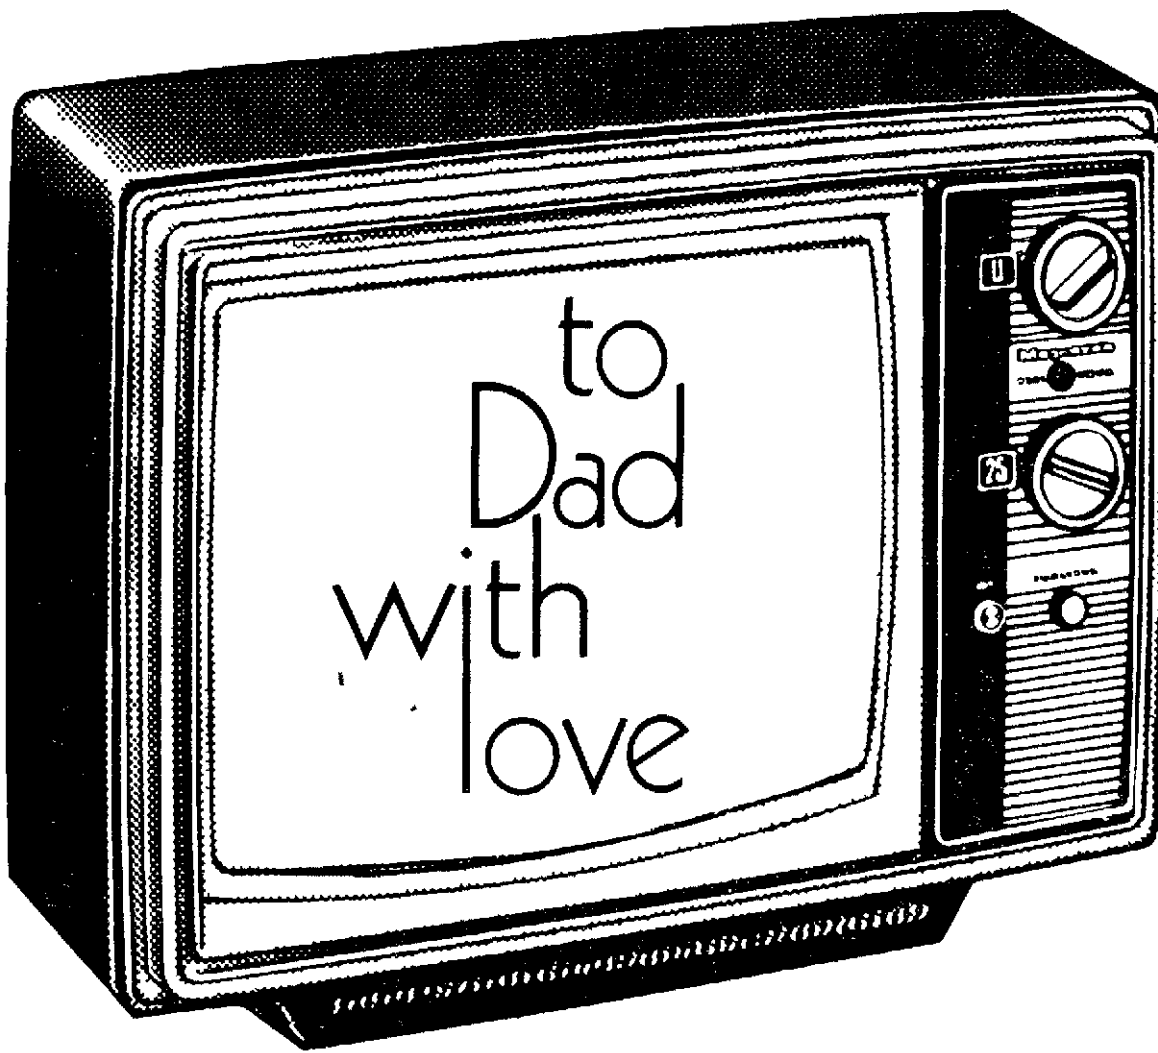

If he's worth having, he will be honest enough to explain all the fine print to you before you purchase any policy. Caveat emptor is more important now than ever. Indeed, the buyer must beware.

Market Loss Blamed For Malpractice Policy Cutback

By CHRIS CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

One of the nation's largest medical malpractice insurance companies tried to cut back on policies for doctors partially because of big losses it rang up in the stock market, its former president says. Meanwhile, critics of the company, Argonaut Insurance Co., say its financial loss may only be a paper one, engineered through an unjustified buildup of cash reserves.

The Menlo Park, Calif., firm has been in the middle of many of the malpractice insurance storms that have swept the country. Its demands for rate increases of up to 400 per cent sparked the just-ended doctors' strike in California and has led to threats of strikes elsewhere. When state insurance commissioners have balked at granting huge increases, the company has curtailed or cut off coverage saying money settlements in malpractice cases are rising too fast.

Yet its former president, Bruce Woolery, says that Argonaut's financial dilemma has its roots on the floors of the nation's stock exchanges as well as in hospital rooms and courthouses.

The crisis for Argonaut "started along about last May a year ago when the market went to pieces," according to Woolery. "The money that was coming into the insurance companies that was available for investments was just not there."

Everything Went Wrong

"Everything that could go wrong did go wrong in 1974. Not only did the stock market go down, but the loss ratios (on claims) went up. . . . Never before in the history of the insurance industry had so many things gone wrong at the same time."

Although Argonaut was doing well enough to declare a $10.5 million dividend for its parent company and sole stockholder, Teledyne Inc., early last year, it said it lost $83.4 million underwriting all forms of insurance in 1974. Its financial statement showed that its investment income of $22.4 million was nearly eradicated by a loss of $15 million on stock sold during 1974, coupled with a downward adjustment of another $6.2 million on stock it held.

Argonaut was not alone in taking a beating in the bearish market last year. Barron's, the weekly financial newspaper, has estimated the total investment loss for all casualty insurers at $6 billion. Many found themselves spread too thin, carrying too many policies with their depleted surpluses.

Their recourse was to "cut back on the most speculative writings," like malpractice, according to Woolery, who quit as Argonaut's president last December. He was among nine top executives who left the company late last year in open disagreement over the directives coming from the parent company, a Los Angeles-based conglomerate that makes products ranging from tank engines to player pianos.

Teledyne acquired Argonaut in 1969. It said earlier this year it was a mistake to allow Argonaut to become extensively involved in malpractice coverage, and it stated its intention of discontinuing coverage for individual doctors this year, while continuing to cover hospitals.

Argonaut reportedly covered 30,000 doctors and one-quarter of the nation's hospitals at the end of 1974.

Thought Most Arbitrary

Other firms have filed for huge rate hikes, but Argonaut has been accused by doctors and others of being the most arbitrary and quickest to cancel.

Dr. Roger O. Egeberg, the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare's top malpractice expert, said: "Teledyne has looked at Argonaut purely from the financial point of view and not with any of the usual industry attitudes and ethics."

Questions have been raised in several states, including Florida, North Carolina and New Jersey, about whether Argonaut actually did lose $83.4 million last year. Some critics say it may have been just a loss on paper created by a huge increase in the company's financial reserves. The reserves are put aside to eventually pay known claims and expected claims. Hiking the reserves creates a need for higher rates, they say, as well as giving the company tax benefits.

Officials at Argonaut's home office in Menlo Park refused to discuss the firm's malpractice business. Al Pettit, Argonaut's eastern division manager in its Cranford, N.J., office, said the reserves were raised "as we acquired a little more knowledge of malpractice."

Although the 1974 financial statement does not give a breakdown on malpractice, experts say it forms the bulk of Argonaut's "liability other than auto" category, which accounted for 36 per cent of its business.

Premiums $97.9 Million

Net premiums in this category increased to $97.9 million in 1974 from $60.7 million in 1973, while the actual losses paid rose to $12.6 million in 1974 from $9.5 million in 1973. But its reserve for known claims climbed to $88.4 million from $48.3 million, and a reserve for injuries incurred but not yet reported jumped to $87.6 million from $27.8 million — a threefold increase.

In New Jersey, where Argonaut recently stopped covering 29 hospitals after first requesting a 410 per cent increase, Insurance Commissioner James J. Sheeran said: "If those (reserve) increases are not substantiated, then you have what looks to me like a losing operation suddenly turned into a profitable operation."

There is considerable disagreement among experts on just how high those reserves should be. The nature of malpractice suits, where most awards are made five years after the damage is done, complicates the issue, according to Dr. Egeberg.

"It very well may be they are putting aside too much for what they will have to pay out. On the other hand, there may not be enough," said Egeberg, who is special assistant for health policy to the secretary of HEW.

'Rough Field'

Abraham Gassner, chief of the New York State Insurance Department's audit bureau, said: "It's a rough field and I don't know what the right figure is."

But Gassner says he believes Argonaut lost money in 1974, and he said that if malpractice coverage were profitable, insurance companies would be vying for the business. Fewer than a dozen companies carry malpractice insurance.

A peculiarity of malpractice is its so-called long tail — claims that may be brought a decade or more after a doctor's treatment, as in the case of an infant deformed by maltreatment at birth.

Woolery, of Woodside, Calif., said only one of every 200 claims is settled during the policy year the malpractice occurred in. After two years, only 3.5 per cent are settled, while half the claims are settled in five years. It takes about 12 years to dispose of them all, he said.

About 20,000 malpractice claims are filed each year, although Egeberg estimates that as many as 700,000 injuries occur each year because of medical negligence. The physicians win 80 per cent of the cases that go to trial, and 55 per cent over-all. But the number of claims has been rising 10 to 12 per cent each year, with the amounts awarded by juries rising at the same rate, according to Egeberg.

At the same time, the premiums collected by the insurers are sitting in reserves collecting interest.

No Profit Expected

"We never expected to make a profit underwriting malpractice," said Woolery, "but you hang on to your loss dollars (reserves) for such a long time, you make it on your investments." A company could expect to earn 30 per cent on investment income before paying out its premiums, he said.

In several states moves are afoot for groups of doctors and hospitals to form their own malpractice insurance carrier.

In New York, the medical society is working on a plan to offer doctors coverage at increases of only 10 to 15 per cent, instead of the 186 per cent Argonaut wanted on a policy that expires June 30.

A consultant for the New Jersey Hospital Association recommended in January that the association form its own insurance company. He based the recommendation in part on a study indicating Argonaut had reserved 268 per cent more than it eventually paid out in claims from several dozen New Jersey and Pennsylvania hospitals over a seven-year period.

The consultant, Howard T. Scherr of Princeton, N.J., acknowledged that Argonaut would take issue with his statistics.

"No one really has accurate statistics," he said. "No one really has a handle on this thing."

Civil Defense Stores May Be Given Away

Food supplies and water stored for use in a nuclear attack may be given or even thrown away.

The Lancaster County Board agreed to continue pursuing the possibility of giving the food away at a meeting this week.

More than one million pounds of all kinds of high protein foods, mostly in the form of crackers and biscuits, are stored in 180 buildings throughout the county and in the Irvingdale Park Civil Defense supply shelter.

The State Office of Planning and Programming has agreed to take a coordinating role in distribution of the food through the Agency of International Development (AID) or other agencies, according to a letter to Board Chairman Jan Gauger.

"It is our opinion that such a distribution can take place," Robert D. Kuzelka, comprehensive planning coordinator for the agency, said in the letter.

The decision to give away the Civil Defense food supplies rests with the city and county governments, which jointly own the food, he said.

Though there is apparently no legal problems with giving the food away, there may be a financial cost for transportation. And the food, much of it more than a decade old, must be tested, Mrs. Gauger pointed out.

The State Office of Planning and Programming has agreed to try to come up with some kind of plan to cover the financial impact, Mrs. Gauger said.

And if the food is not fit for human consumption, perhaps the animals at the local zoo might find it tasty, Commissioner Robert Colin said, only half joking.

The two governments have been toying with the idea of disposing of the crackers and water for more than a year, and the idea surfaced again several months ago when the county was looking for additional storage space for election equipment.

S.D. Trucker Lost For Week Near Hoskins

Hoskins (AP) — A truck driver from Philip, S.D., has been missing since Friday night in the Hoskins area.

The Nebraska State Patrol said Orrin Carstensen, 22, was scheduled to deliver a truck load of cattle to a ranch Friday night. The truck was found Saturday morning with the keys in the ignition, the motor running and the cattle still in the truck.

The truck was parked on a road leading away from the ranch.

Authorities said Carstensen called the ranch about 10 p.m. Friday and said he would arrive in an hour. No trace of him was found in a search conducted Saturday and Sunday.

Mellerdrammer

Maybe Funniest One Yet

By WES ALBERS
Star Staff Writer

Things haven't changed much at the Gas Light mellerdrammers. The lines are still as corny, the audience is still as feisty and many of the actors are the same.

But the crowds have gotten bigger, and the second mellerdrammer of the summer, "On the Bridge at Midnight," looks like it might be the funniest yet.

After a slow first act in which a motley assortment of female characters has the audience eating its popcorn instead of throwing it, the cast gets down to the serious business of being funny.

And once that happens, the popcorn starts going onto the stage where it belongs.

The last two acts are a blur of clenched hands, empassioned pleas and heart-stopping curses. The actresses say things like "tis false, 'tis false." The hero makes a speech: "A woman's place is in the home with a man's love to protect her."

But the audience loves it. The audience, in fact, even goes as far as to forget that those lines were in the mellerdrammer before, and the one before that and the one before that.

Stephen Cholka (Horatio Wainwright) and Randy Van Velkinburgh (Mervyn Parsons) give fine performances as the hero and villain, respectively. But the real audience-pleasers were stuttering Maybelle Billings (played by Lincoln High student Donna Stuver) and the butler, Halstead (played by Jim Steenson, the villain in the first mellerdrammer, "True Blue and Trusted").

The set is much better this time, despite an all-red decor that looks like the work of Mao Tse-tung or a Big Red interior decorator.

And, egad — as the hero would say — "On the Bridge at Midnight" actually has a plot that borders on being unpredictable, perhaps a first for mellerdrammers.

The show will run Wednesday through Saturday until July 5 at the Gas Light Theater, 322 S. 9th at 9 p.m.

Master Intends To Resign State Institutions Post

Dr. Frank Master will resign his post as medical services director for state institutions in August to take a similar post in Las Vegas, Nev.

Jack Cleavenger, acting institutions director, reportedly has not chosen a successor for Master.

Master, who assumed the post roughly one year ago, said his family prefers living in that part of the country.

Evening Storm Lashes Lincoln

Those who believe a full moon can exert powerful influence on man's life should take a look at what a simple thunderstorm can do.

The storm that swept across Lincoln between 6 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. Wednesday left only .03 of an inch of rain at the airport. But in that half hour, there was one injury accident, several property damage accidents, a fire at a Lincoln Electric System substation and scattered power outages.

A 17-year-old Lincoln boy suffered minor injuries in a car-motorcycle accident near 13th and Van Dorn shortly after the storm hit, police said.

Clifford D. Ostgaard, of 2760 S. 13th, was being held at Lincoln General Hospital Wednesday night for observation after sustaining undetermined injuries, a hospital spokesman said.

Several minor property damage accidents also occurred during the storm, police said. A car at 23rd and R had a limb fall across it, and a house at 56th and Newton was hit by a tree.

Fire did minor damage to a Lincoln Electric System substation at 27th and N during the storm.

An LES spokesman said the fire started when high winds and rain caused a breaker to short out. Power was off for 20 minutes in an area from 17th to Superior and N St. to Capital Parkway, he said.

Thirty-five customers in the Pine Lake area experienced a two-hour power outage when wind and rain blew a fuse on a 12,500-volt line, the spokesman said.

In addition, he said, there were scattered outages throughout town caused by falling tree limbs. The National Weather Service clocked winds at 38 miles per hour in the airport and had reports of stronger winds in south Lincoln.

UNL Students Win Stipends

The winners are Del S. Fischer of Naper, a civil engineering student, and Gene Wrich of Blair, a computer science major.

The Federal Government and other research laboratories have published many facts on the increasing noise factor in our towns and cities. The noise level is going up due to automobile and truck traffic, jet aircraft, industry and home appliances. Our children are even exposed to a loudness level above tolerable limits by loud music played on radio, at dances, on television — Everywhere you go noise pollution is growing. Today, one of the most common causes of a hearing loss is from extreme noise sustained over a period of time. Protect your hearing. Friedheim New ANPA Officer

Washington (UPI) — The American Newspaper Publishers Association appointed Jerry W. Friedheim, a former Pentagon spokesman, as its new chief administrative officer.

Friedheim, who worked in the Pentagon from 1969 to 1974, succeeds Stanford Smith, an Army Reserve major general who has gone on active duty to work in the Pentagon on the Reserve Board.

Friedheim has been vice president of Amtrak for public and government affairs since leaving the Pentagon last September.

Mini Bookmobile Service Slated To Begin June 15

The Lincoln City Libraries Board announced Wednesday a June 15 target starting date for its minibookmobile service. The weekly route of 17 stops is to be announced within a week.

Remodeling is still being done on the Winnebago camper that will become a mobile lending unit traveling to residential areas, schoolgrounds, mobile home courts and shopping centers.

Charles Dalrymple, director of libraries, reported on budget hearings with the mayor and said a review would be made of the library system's fines and fees. It's possible that fines and fees will be raised as a result of that review, his office said.

The board also discussed letting bids for an independent steam heating system and said it was again seeking county funds for services provided to Lancaster County residents outside the city. The library system has had county funds since 1960.

The board sent to committee a request by the Lincoln Multiple Sclerosis Chapter for library cooperation in a read-a-thon fund raising project.

Service hours at the Northeast Branch Library at 27th & Orchard will change June 15 so that it will have hours similar to the other branches.

All city libraries will be closed Friday, July 4.

Food Stamp, GI Money Compromise Accepted

Washington (UPI) — The Senate backed down Wednesday and accepted a House compromise that sent to President Ford a $15 billion money bill with desperately needed funds for veterans and food stamp recipients.

The Senate passed the big supplemental appropriations measure by voice vote, but only after denouncing the House for providing only $5 million rather than the $175 million the Senate wanted in the bill to improve railroad tracks.

The measure had bounced back and forth between the two bodies three times since it came out of a conference committee May 22 with only the railroad funds as the sticking point.

Speaker Carl Albert earlier Wednesday denounced the Senate for creating a "disgraceful situation" where veterans' educational benefits were being held up and the food stamp program was threatened. Sen. John McClellan, D-Ark., manager of the bill, said it was "inconsiderate" of Albert to blame the Senate for delay in passing the bill. "If the House had not taken a recess this could have been resolved," he said.

The House was unable to muster a quorum to vote on the measure when it came out of the conference committee on the same day both the Senate and House were to start the Memorial Day recess.

Referring to Albert's comment, Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., said, "If this is a disgraceful situation then it was demonstrated by the other body. The Senate has long memories." Some 500,000 veterans have not received their June education benefits checks. The food stamp program, with its 20 million participants, may run out of money by the end of this week.

Millions of federal civilian and military personnel may lose temporarily the cost of living raise they received earlier this year, for which $2 billion was provided in the money bill.

They have been paid the 5.5% pay increase from other funds, but agencies are fast running out of sources to continue the pay hikes.

STANLEY K. HATHAWAY

Hathaway OK'd Despite Replies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Wyoming Gov. Stanley K. Hathaway was confirmed by the Senate Wednesday as secretary of the interior despite attacks on his environmental record and charges that he had tried to mislead senators.

The 60 to 36 vote followed a last-minute unsuccessful attempt to send the nomination back to committee so Hathaway could be asked about differing statements on a strip mining bill.

As interior secretary, Hathaway, 50, a Republican, will succeed Rogers C. B. Morton, who has become secretary of commerce. Hathaway is the sixth of the 11 Cabinet members to be nominated by President Ford.

The Hathaway nomination was fought mainly on grounds that his record as governor indicated he was more concerned with the state's economic growth than with protecting the environment. However, his response to senators' questions became the chief issue in the final Senate debate.

Leading the defense of Hathaway were Sens. Henry M. Jackson, chairman of the Interior Committee; Clifford P. Hansen, R-Wyo., and Gale McGee, D-Wyo.

"He has tried to strike a reasonable balance between development and the environment," said Hansen.

During hearings in April and May before Jackson's committee, Hathaway supporters handed to senators a compilation of what were described as his environmental accomplishments when he served as governor from 1967 through 1974.

After the document was sharply attacked by several environmental groups, Hathaway acknowledged it contained some exaggerations but said he had no hand in preparing it. However, he said under questioning that he had seen it before it was presented to senators.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, chairman of the Senate pollution subcommittee, asked the Senate to send the nomination back to the Interior Committee so that Hathaway could be challenged face-to-face on his differing statements on strip-mine legislation. The motion lost, 54 to 40.

On May 6, Hathaway said he basically supports the strip-mine legislation approved by Congress but would not advise the President on the bill until he had more information on its economic impact.

Sixteen days later, after winning endorsement of the Interior Committee, Hathaway told reporters he fully supported Ford's plan to veto the bill. An aide said Hathaway still had not been briefed on the economic impact.

Ford vetoed the bill on grounds it would damage the nation's drive toward energy independence and cost thousands of jobs.

Nebraska's Republican Sens. Carl Curtis and Roman Hruska both voted for Hathaway.

Housing Bill Sent To Likely Death

Washington (UPI) — The Senate Wednesday passed and sent to the White House — and a likely veto — a bill which backers said would spur the construction of 400,000 houses and prevent 100,000 foreclosures.

The $1.35 billion measure would offer mortgage interest

$51,000 Collected

Eagle Grove, Iowa (UPI) — Chamber of Commerce officials here announced they have solicited more than $51,000 in private funding during the past five weeks to help pay for the construction of a new public library.

subsidies to middle-income homebuyers and loans of $250 a month for two years to homeowners who lose their jobs and face foreclosure.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said the bill would generate 800,000 jobs, $12 billion in business activity and more tax revenues than it cost the government.

But Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., said it would cause the government to increase its borrowing, driving interest rates up and in effect forcing other borrowers to subsidize those who benefit from the bill's mortgage interest subsidies.

The measure was adopted by a 72-24 vote despite the administration's opposition and its threat to veto the measure on budgetary grounds. When the bill passed the House last week, the 253-155 was not enough to provide the two-thirds margin needed to override a veto.

Must, Ford Tells Rabin

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford urged Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin on Wednesday to take steps "to regain momentum toward a negotiated settlement in the Middle East."

The White House did not specify what concessions may have been asked of the Israeli leader, although it reiterated Ford's expressed determination not to have "a stalemate in the peacemaking process."

The mood was serious as Ford and Rabin conferred for an hour and 45 minutes in the Oval Office. Lacking were the flashes of ceremony and mutual public compliments that marked Ford's summit with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat last week in Salzburg, Austria.

A terse report distributed by Ron Nessen, the White House press secretary, said "the talks were conducted in the spirit of frankness and cordiality which has long characterized the friendship between the United States and Israel." The reference to "frankness is a diplomatic way of noting differences between the two sides."

Israel already has signaled its willingness to settle for something less than a non-belligerency pledge from Egypt in exchange for a partial withdrawal in the Sinai. It is not yet clear, however, whether this is enough to send Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger or a deputy shuttling back to the Middle East.

Nessen told reporters there was "no political significance" to the lack of ceremony. He attributed the fanfare in Salzburg to the fact that a third country, Austria, was involved and that Ford and Sadat were meeting for the first time.

At the State Department, spokesman Robert Funseth said "the welcome is warm" for Rabin and that the United States is hopeful of bringing the Arabs and Israel together.

King, Syria OK Fighting Side By Side

By United Press International

King Hussein of Jordan and Syrian President Hafez Assad have reached "full agreement" to unite their forces in a joint fighting front in any way with Israel, Jordanian government sources said Wednesday.

The reported revival of the old Arab western front coincided with Israeli newspaper reports that both Israel and Jordan are strengthening their fortifications along the Jordan River frontier.

Amman reports said Assad and Hussein flew by helicopter to the northern frontier where the borders of Jordan and Syria meet Israel to inspect Jordan's frontline positions.

Assad arrived in Amman Tuesday on a state visit — the first by a Syrian head of state to Jordan in 18 years.

Assad arrived in Amman with the slogan, "One People, One Army." His agreement with Hussein revives the old Arab eastern front against Israel which combined the armies of Jordan and Syria prior to the June 1967 war.

Energy High On Soviets' Priority List

Moscow (UPI) — The Soviet Union Wednesday disclosed its economic priorities for the next five years, putting energy development high among them.

Consumer goods and improved services also were listed but Western economic sources said it was unlikely they would receive the urgent attention going to fuel or heavy industry.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda printed a series of economic areas which the council of ministers, meeting Tuesday, said should receive special attention in the next five-year plan, covering 1976 to 1980.

Among them was "a greater supply of fuel to the peoples economy by means of increase of production and all possible economies in the use of fuel."

Though it was cited last, the economists said indications were the fuel situation would get urgent attention under the next plan.

Schools To Give Peer Plan Tryout

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Whittier and Everett Junior High School officials hope to reverse the high incidence of juvenile delinquency among their students through a program being used successfully in Omaha schools and at the Kearney Youth Development Center.

The Region II Crime Commission endorsed the Lincoln Public Schools' grant application for $92,727 to establish positive peer programs at the two schools. The next step requires approval from the State Crime Commission.

More students from those two schools are arrested and appear in juvenile court than students from other Lincoln schools.

'Negative Attitudes'
"We see a lot of negative attitudes among the kids," the principals from the two schools told the commission.

"The kids are alienated. Attendance is deplorable." A narrative explaining the need for the program said, "School records provide evidence of disruptive behavior, truancy, fighting and thefts" at the two schools.

It indicated that 16% of the students at Whittier and 9% of those at Everett appeared in juvenile court on various charges during a period spanning 11 months in 1974.

'Contacts' With Council

Both schools also had the highest number of students who had had "contacts" with police (257 out of 366 students at Whittier and 196 of 456 at Everett fell in this category.)

The principals said the colleges are doing a good job versing teachers on school work but do not show them how to work with students who have problems.

The positive peer programs are based on the simple assumption that the best way to influence kids is through their peers. By turning a few of the natural leaders into positive activities, the system tries to influence other students. Such influences carry over into the students' home and social lives.

Social Dynamics

The Lincoln grant also proposes to use another system utilizing the teachers, called the social dynamics system, at one of the schools.

The principals said three elementary schools will be watching to see how it works in Whittier and Everett. In future years, the program will follow the initial group of students through Lincoln High.

By 1978, the schools hope to see the number of juvenile court cases drop by 20% and the number of police contacts drop by 30%.

But as one commission member noted, the firms which offer the programs are not in it "for fun — they do it to make money."

In other business, the commission also endorsed a grant application seeking $156,016 to staff the new juvenile detention center being constructed near 10th and South Sts.

July 30 Target

Plans call for it to be finished by July 30 and youths to begin moving in by Aug. 1.

The center will house youths under 18 who are awaiting court appearances or who are dangerous to themselves or others. Such youths are now held in either the city jail or at Westview Nursing Home.

There should be an average of five or six youths and two staff members on duty at the center.

The program statement said the new center should allow youths to stay there temporarily without giving them the feeling they are being punished. It said if a youth leaves with a good attitude there is a better chance he will adjust satisfactorily.

The commission also passed a resolution favoring creation of a city-county corrections department.

Closed Session Vote Tangles Appointment

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

A parliamentary snafu has tripped up Glen Soukup's appointment as director of the Nebraska Commission on Aging.

Legally, Soukup is not the new commission director, since the commission agreed to hire him in a closed-door session.

In so doing, the commission violated the state's open meeting law, which requires all votes taken by public bodies to occur in open session.

Joe Gaida, the commission's outgoing director, confirmed that fact Wednesday when The Star asked for the minutes of the May commission meeting and specifically the vote on Soukup's appointment.

To correct the situation, Gaida said the commission will have to vote on Soukup's appointment again at its Friday meeting — in open session.

State's Liquor Revenue Down From Last Year

The Nebraska Liquor Control Commission reported Wednesday that May revenue dipped slightly from the same month a year ago.

The commission said tax, license and shipper permit revenue for May of this year was $871,387 compared with 937,487 a year ago.

The May receipts brought total revenue for the year to $4,009,386, compared with $4,114,612 by the same time a year ago.

The May breakdown: alcohol, spirits and wine taxes, $553,504; beer taxes, $308,027; license fees, $2,150; registration fees, $148; shipper permits, $200; miscellaneous revenue, $7,337.

Donald Russell, commission chairman and an attorney in Alma, called the fact the vote came in a closed meeting "an oversight," caused by the fact a number of commission members had to leave.

Asked what the vote on Soukup's appointment was, Russell refused to disclose it. Questioned further about possible disagreement among commission members on the appointment, Russell replied, "I'm not going to tell you. You just want to take a cheap shot at somebody."

"I don't like that kind of send-off for a new director."

Nine final candidates for the post were considered by the commission.

Other commission members questioned about the vote also refused to disclose it.

Gaida said neither he nor his staff was present during the closed session for the discussion or the vote. He said it wasn't until later that he realized the vote had occurred in closed session.

The minutes of the meeting do not reflect the vote, he said.

Soukup, 33, is presently the director of the State Technical Assistance Agency, which helps communities plan grant applications.

Rochester, N.Y. (UPI) — The Greeks undoubtedly had a word for it — the equivalent of "bathtub ring." Infrared photographs of a bathtub taken by art historian Ethel S. Japanese Beef Policies May Not Help U.S. Producers

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is a report from the business editor of the Sunday Journal and Star, who has just returned from Japan and is writing a series of stories dealing with Japanese-American agricultural and industrial developments and their significance to Nebraskans.)

By GENE KELLY

Tokyo — From the gray-tiled inner sanctum of Japanese government, good and bad news is issued. But it's tough, at time, to tell which is which.

A prohibition of beef imports will be lifted any day now, say government spokesmen. The restrictions have been in effect since February 1974.

This sounds like good news.

But the import quota has been set at such a low level that an official at Monfort of Colorado in Greeley, a major exporter of beef before the embargo was imposed, calls it "a drop in the oaken bucket."

And a Lincolnite who formerly exported beef to Japan says he's going to react to the lifting of the embargo by doing nothing.

Stanley H. Sands, president of Standard Meat Co., notes "it was fun and interesting, but that market dried up, as has exporting to the Common Market countries."

"I'm not eager to get back into the Japanese market. It's too specialized. You need a market broad enough to absorb T-bones and rib steaks, cuts worth shipping."

"Besides, Australia and New Zealand can often sell to them for less. They have an edge on transportation costs."

Potential Said Large

Despite some Great Plains disillusionment about the embargo and the fact that the new import quota is so austere, Glenn Kreuscher, state agricultural director, says he continues to be impressed by the potential size of the Japanese beef import market.

"I keep telling people we have to be on our toes, since these people are already our number one customer."

"If through imports, we could add a pound a person to their beef consumption, you'd need a hand calculator to keep track of the implications." Japan's population, at 110 million, is increasing about 1% a year.

Kreuscher says the Japanese have become accustomed to the taste of Nebraska-style beef. "And you'd better believe they like it. They are tremendously aware of the energy value of this protein."

"Now, if their government will let them import more of it, and if they can afford more of it..."

For Consumer

Then lifting the embargo must be good news for the Japanese consumer.

(Symbol is Japanese character used to refer to the United States — and for rice and the honored age of 88.)

It is, to some extent, as part of a new program to stabilize Japanese beef prices and make this mountainous archipelago nation more self-sufficient.

But beef prices are being stabilized between floor and ceiling prices that will benefit only the Japanese farmer. He will be assured of getting $1.65 to $1.90 a pound on the wholesale market for choice-graded dairy steers (65% of all domestic beef produced).

The program was formulated during the embargo to assure cattle and dairy beef raisers of a higher level of return. Most of them lost money or, at best, broke even, on beef last year when they were caught between declining market prices and surging feed grain costs.

And how has the Japanese consumer reacted to the idea of keeping the supermarket price of this came choice beef at about $4.75 a pound? (Beef rib roasts are $10 a pound, and Kobe-type beef begins at $15 a pound.)

Consumers Cut Back

Despite wage increases during 1974 that averaged 32%, the consumer has cut back on beef purchases.

Although the government's Economic Planning Agency has been saying that an upturn is in the wind for the Japanese economy, the consumer is faced with price increases of 13.4% during the four months that ended April 30. This was in sharp contrast to 26% for the same period a year earlier.

While a desire for beef may continue, this inflation has left fewer yen in the pocket. Protectionist policies exact a price.

And this drop in consumer demand is one thing that prompted the government to set the new beef import quota so low — at a minimum of 10,000 metric tons (22 million pounds) for the remainder of 1975. This contrasts with a 70,000 metric ton quota for the last half of 1974. A higher consumer demand and a slip in domestic beef production could increase this quota to 40,000 metric tons, government officials said.

Farmer Comes First

Japanese officials listen to this suggestion, then smile knowingly, when it is suggested this would be the ideal time to import lower-priced Nebraska grass — or corn-fed beef.

"The Japanese farmer must come first in our thinking," said Teiji Yokonizo, meat section chief of the Livestock Industry Promotion Corp., a quasi-governmental agency.

Yokonizo, who has the job of coordinating the beef import quota, blames the entire embargo problem on "the world economic event of 1973 — the oil crisis," which he says boosted the price of almost all retail items and caused "shortages based on hoarding... people scrambled for toilet paper, detergents, everything, it seems, except beef."

Excess imported beef became a glut on the market, he explained. "So I had to stop beef imports or completely devastate the local beef industry."

Then, during 1974, beef production in Japan increased by 50%, to 350,000 metric tons, he said, based on the government's self-sufficiency policy.

And despite the import freeze, about 50,000 metric tons of beef was imported.

Japanese Production Down

Production of beef by Japanese farmers is expected to be down about 10% from a year ago, as are the domestic feed grain crops. These are factors that helped to wedge the import door open again.

This is also good news for U.S. feed grain growers. It means that feed grain imports to Japan are likely to remain at a high level, with most of them coming from American granaries.

Economists at the Fuji Bank say that while the Japanese farmer supplied 73% of the nation's grain needs 10 years ago, he now is only able to grow about 40%.

The Economic Research Service of the USDA estimates these Nebraska ag exports in fiscal 1974:

—Meat product exports from the state during fiscal 1974 were valued at $73 million.

—Wheat and flour product exports were worth $261 million.
—Feed grain exports were valued at $497 million.
Officials of the U.S. Feed Grains Council in Tokyo say that no foreign beef will be brought in before late summer, and that it will probably be from Australia.
Only after watching the impact that such imports have on the market price of domestic beef, "will private traders be granted quotas and licenses," says Harold D. Smedley, assistant Asian director of the council.

Hiroyasu Ohnaya, the council's ag advisor, adds that the import door will be opened also because of "the fear of a possible shortage of market cattle in the autumn..."

From Cursing To Bears On Ropes

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

Quite a few things are illegal in Lincoln.

The city's bulging lawbook deals with everything from cursing to bears on ropes to slingshots to endurance contests.

There actually is an ordinance against spitting on the sidewalk.

Ordinance No. 9.68.090 states, "It is hereby declared unlawful for any person to expectorate on any sidewalk."

Some of the laws deal with problems that apparently vanished long ago.

Competent Cattle Driver

One law declares that no one can drive cattle through the streets "without providing one competent person as driver for each ten head or fractional part thereof."

The same chapter of laws, all dealing with animals, has another question-provoking ordinance.

It says that it is unlawful for a person to "indecently exhibit any stud horse or bull," or to let (a delicate term for breed) any such bull to cows, unless the pair are out of public view.

The same chapter has a law forbidding anyone to lead a bear (or wolf or other noxious or dangerous animal) with a chain.

Some of the laws on the books exist in a different climate than that in which they were originally enacted.

Take No. 9.52.010, for example.

That law forbids cursing or swearing, as well as loud, boisterous hallooing.

Things have also changed since they passed the law on immoral conduct. From what you read in the magazines, see on the screen and hear at the office these days, sex is running rampant.

But No. 9.52.110 declares that it is illegal for unmarried persons of the opposite sex to "be together under indecent or immoral circumstances."

And the law doesn't stop there. It's also illegal for unmarried people of the opposite sex to have sexual intercourse.

Right next to this law is another on "soliciting by prostitute."

Among the provisions of this law is one that prohibits women from making any "bold or meretricious (cheaply ornamental) display of herself."

What did that mean back when the law originated? Can you imagine a judge riding up to court in his buckboard to check out a woman of the 1970's in shorts and a halter top?

Passing Fancy

Some laws can perhaps be traced back to specific fads that soon passed from the public's fancy.

There is an ordinance that brings to mind the depression. It forbids dance marathons, walkathons or other endurance contests between midnight and 8 a.m. the next day.

The city has a whole section of laws regulating the registration, construction and operation of trampoline centers, if they ever come back into style.

If anyone wants to hawk liniment or salve on the city's street, like they perhaps did back in the frontier days, there's a law that specifically forbids that.

There's no law on the books against a wholesale updating and revision of the lawbook.

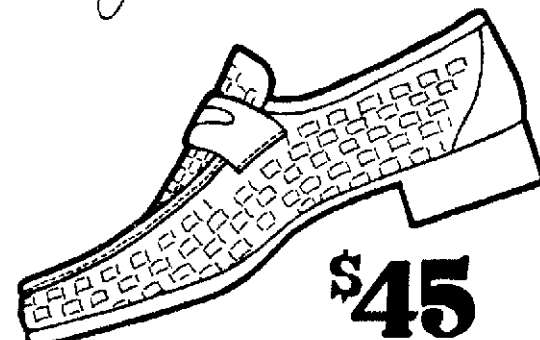

In fact, it's been done at least twice — in 1908 and 1936.

Four Years Long Enough To Mourn Husband

DEAR ABBY: You are the only person I can think of who might be able to help. It's about my mother, Abby.

My father died four years ago (he was 71), and my mother is still carrying on like he died last week. She talks about him constantly. She visits his grave every single day, and if we don't go with her every Sunday, she thinks we're disrespectful.

Every holiday is turned into a day of mourning because Mother insists on all of us going to the cemetery with her to cry over Papa's grave.

We loved our father, too, but don't you think four years of mourning is long enough?

Mother's doctor told her it's time she snapped out of it, but it hasn't helped her any.

Isn't there something we can do?

MOTHER TROUBLE

DEAR TROUBLE: Yes. Tell your mother's doctor that simply telling a deeply troubled woman to "snap out of it" is not much help. She needs treatment to resolve her grief and resume a normal life. Her daily visits to the cemetery and constant talk of her deceased husband are symptoms of her illness. And if her doctor doesn't clearly see this, find one who does.

DEAR ABBY: Ten months ago, I met this wonderful man, and we fell in love. We plan a December wedding. I am 24. He's 29.

One thing bothers me. Three years ago, I chose to have an abortion. No one knows about it, and I want to block it out of my mind forever. I know I did the right thing and have no guilt feelings about it, but here's the problem:

Recently, my fiance said that he wanted me to know all about his past, so he confessed to a few past love affairs. I didn't consider any of them very serious. Then he said he had the feeling that something in my past was bothering me because it "shows." (He couldn't possibly know anything.)

I wonder if I should tell him about the abortion. He seems to be very understanding. But what if he isn't? If I told him and he were to throw it up to me later, I couldn't stand that.

Should I tell him?

NEEDS ADVICE
DEAR NEEDS: Since you don't know how "understanding" he would be and you don't feel the need to "unburden" yourself — keep mum. I think your fiance is fishing. Don't bite.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "UPTIGHT MOM," whose 4-year-old kid refused to eat anything but peanut butter and jelly sandwiches and chocolate chip ice cream.

I have three kids and they've never had an eating problem. Know why? Because kids eat only what you have in the house. I never have junk foods around. No sugar drinks, cookies or candy. Only nutritious foods, fresh fruit, vegetables and milk. That's what they eat for snacks because that's all they can find.

Also, I never take my kids along when I go marketing because kids want everything they see advertised on TV.

Personally, I'd be ashamed to call my doctor and tell him my 4-year-old kid was giving me orders.

Just give the kids what YOU think they should eat, and if they don't want it, they can go without. Pretty soon they'll get hungry enough to eat anything.

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

He walks slowly, bent over a cane. The days of hopping aboard a horse, a wagon, a train for another show junkie are past.

White Cloud Smith, musician, teacher, writer, actor, lecturer . . . the list of labels goes on and on . . . is older now.

He was forced into retirement twice, but kept working. If he had his way and his health permitted it, he probably would still be going strong — at 97.

The twinkle hasn't left his eye. He still has the schoolboy grin that caused him many a problem in his younger days. He practically had to fight off the young women who mobbed him at stage doors across the country.

Master Storyteller

White Cloud Smith is still a master storyteller.

The stories he recounts are true ones, he says. Tales of his experiences span nearly a century.

"I could tell you stories all day, and they'd all be different," Smith says.

The silverhaired, silvertongued musician, lecturer, etc. doesn't live in the past. But he loves to talk about it. What he can remember.

"My mind is getting so it slips," he says, eyes still twinkling. "It's so bad," he said, angry with himself, that some memories had slipped into bolivia.

But there still are plenty of experiences he can remember. Like being raised near the sod house where he was born — north of North Platte in 1877. On the treeless Nebraska plains. He vividly remembers using buffalo chips for fuel — that was all there was.

And he remembers "there was nothing there but Indians and cowboys."

No wonder he donned buckskins, a neckerchief, a Western hat to earn his living.

Buffalo Bill Band

Smith got his start in show business with Buffalo Bill's Wild West concert and circus band. Just how long he stayed with the show, Smith can't remember. He started in the entertainment business at 14, stayed until he was 70 and kept working at other jobs till age 83.

"I can't remember when I didn't play the trumpet," he said. "My father said I played the trumpet before I learned to talk, that I rode a horse before I walked."

Smith was recruited by Buffalo Bill

himself. He "wanted me because no one ever heard of a 14-year-old who played the trumpet like I did."

He was used as the drawing card — and it worked. But so did he. He played trumpet and sang during the performances and like others with Buffalo Bill's Show, and band, Smith had a second job with the company.

For him, traveling with the band was a family affair. His father, Capt. John T. Smith, played the snare drum and made harnesses. His uncle was the camp's butcher and tuba player. His mother, a Pawnee Indian, was in the parade with other Indian women and doubled as a seamstress. Smith, young lad that he was, followed in his father's footsteps and learned harness making.

Traveling with the band of roving minstrels, Smith played a solo at the first World's Fair in Chicago in 1893. And he had the opportunity to know Annie Oakley and Sitting Bull, other Buffalo Bill band and show personalities, on a first-name basis.

Show Of His Own

Working for someone else was not Smith's forte, however. He saw bigger and better things on the horizon. "I left to have a show of my own and make more money on my own," he recalls. And he did. His first venture was the Cloud Rose Tent Show, which he originated with his wife.

The show made the rounds "mostly in Nebraska."

Then he became a practitioner of one-man showmanship. Single handedly, Smith played Davy Crockett and five other characters in the three-act play — all with "no makeup, stage settings or costumes."

For years, the entertainer took his Davy Crockett show on the rounds from California to New York Canada to Mexico. It was "on the order of chautauqua," Smith said.

Then came his 70th birthday — and cancellation. "They were afraid I was too old to talk," he said.

What he did from there was a matter of being in the right place at the right time. He was offered, and accepted the job of superintending schools at the Nebraska penitentiary. That lasted five years, he says. "I was all in. My back was killing me with lumbago."

Still, Smith wasn't ready to call it quits. Then 75, he lied on his application to be tour guide at the State Capitol. "I said I was 69 to get the job," Smith said. The eye shined again, devilishly.

Tourists' Delight

He landed the job and delighted tourists for eight years as he spun yarns and described the symbolism of the mosaics and carvings at the Statehouse before he quit.

At 83, he finally retired.

Oh, he frequently drags out his trademark — the gold-plated engraved trumpet. "I could still play, only I lost all my teeth," he grinned sheepishly.

When anyone's willing to listen, he tells his stories. But mostly he sits by the window or outside and watches cars, people, flowers, birds, trees, just about anything.

"I enjoy every minute. 'See these beautiful trees I have to look at?' he said, the long, slender fingers of a musician pointing at a two-toned oak.

"I love nature so," he said. He feeds birds three times a day. "They come and tell me when they're ready to eat."

And Other Things

Pointing again, this time at a young woman walking by in a barbed dress, he said "See the things I have to look at?"

All talk faded as he went back mentally to the days when his singing, his trumpeting, his good looks caused young women to swoon.

Those were, for Smith, the good old days. But his todays aren't that bad either.

Platonov Cult Reborn

Almost a half a century has passed since Russian author Andrey Platonov wrote "The Foundation Pit."

During most of the intervening years, the book and the author himself were part of that vast underground Soviet literary network created by the machinery of state disapproval.

At the time of his death in 1951, Platonov left behind a large body of unpublished work, of which "The Foundation Pit" is part. After 1958, these writings began to find their way into publication; and since that time, the name Platonov has received the recognition — both popular and official — that was for so long, denied.

Although Platonov considered himself a Communist, it is not surprising that his work was deemed unacceptable by Soviet authorities.

Typical Platonov
According to translator Mirra Ginsburg, "The Foundation Pit" (published in this country by E. P. Dutton) is typical of Platonov's writing. And at the time the novel was written — shortly after the trauma of revolution and collectivization — the questions posed within it could not, for the sake of the revolution, be asked.

In the book, Platonov does not question the rightness or wrongness of ideology or tactics.

Rather, he poses questions more basic, more humane, more in need of answers: What will we have when all this is finished?

Will the glorious dream be worth living?

It is Voshchev, a young laborer who helps dig the foundation pit for a massive communal dwelling, who asks the questions most directly. "Don't people decrease in their sense of life when buildings increase? Man will make a building and unmake himself. Who will live in it then?"

Voshchev the dreamer, who wants to believe in the revolution yet cannot quite attune the vision to the reality. "Everything lives and suffers in the world, without understanding or knowledge," he says.

On another level, the building engineer Prushevsky questions the future and asks only that his building be inhabited by people "full of that excess of warm life that used to be called soul. He was afraid of erecting empty buildings, in which people would live only to keep out of bad weather."

To Author's Credit
In the midst of all this questioning, it is to Platonov's credit as a writer that he has also gone beyond the dreamer, the philosopher, the engineer. In fleetingly poignant moments he has touched the lives of those who, perhaps, suffered most.

Those like the old plowman Ivan Semyonovich Krestyanin, who, with collectivization upon him, "kissed the young trees in his orchard and wrenched them out of the soil with the roots . . . these trees are my own flesh, so let it suffer now, it hates to be socialized into bondage."

Platonov speaks with a voice of compassion for all living creatures touched by the events of his day, of all days. He has understood and recorded the longings of the human spirit, both immediate and universal.

And we mourn with him for his countrymen, for all mankind: "Instead of hope, he had only patience left; and somewhere beyond the successions of nights, beyond the blossoming and the decline of gardens, beyond the people encountered and lost, there was a time when he would have to stretch out on his cot, turn his face to the wall, and die, without ever having learned to weep."

Opening lead — king of spades.

A defender is usually on firm ground when he leads a suit headed by the A-K-Q-J or K-Q-J-10. The lead seldom costs a trick and it is generally safe to continue the suit after winning the opening lead with the king.

But "usually" implies "not always," and there are times when the so-called safe course is not really safe at all. As a matter of fact, in the present case, West's lead of the king of spades followed by the queen was so "safe" that it handed declarer the contract.

South ruffed the queen, forced out the ace of trumps, and later lost only a club trick to the queen to make four hearts.

West should have discontinued spades after the first trick, even though East had signaled with the eight. He could tell from the bidding that East had four spades and declarer only one, and that there was hence no future in another spade lead.

Instead, West should lead the king of clubs at trick two! If he does, South must go down. Declarer can do no better than win with the ace and play a trump.

West takes the ace, leads the club deuce to East's queen and ruffs the club return to put the contract down one.

The basis for West's unusual king of clubs lead at trick two is that he can easily conclude that the contract is unbeatable if South has the queen of clubs.

West therefore assumes that his partner has the queen and proceeds accordingly. He does not rely at all on the illusory safety of another spade lead.

Grads Have To Learn Basic Skills

The New York Times

Portland, Ore. — Vicki Flanner, Cindy Imboden and about 40,000 other Oregon 9th-graders are participating in a high school program under which they will not get their diplomas until they prove that they have become proficient in a wide variety of skills.

Vicki, Cindy and the others are being taught under Oregon's competency-based education system, a statewide effort to assure that high school graduates can function in their homes and in employment offices and voting booths.

Under the system, which began last fall, the state's 179 high school districts must certify that their graduates are competent enough to read, write, speak, analyze and compute, as well as understand themselves, the technological processes around them, their governments and their environment.

The students must show that they are competent enough to find jobs and hold them as well as demonstrate that they can continue learning after high school.

The impetus for the program began in 1969, when state educators started studying the effectiveness of high schools and listening to what residents thought of their schools in a series of "town hall" meetings.

"The people said the diploma had lost its credibility," said W.R.R. Nance, a State Education Department specialist. "They said, 'A high school graduate comes to work for us and can't even read the safety signs in the shop.' That was really it."

Many of the competency indicators are embodied in setting up situations and having students demonstrate that they can solve problems posed by them.

In the Portland suburb of Beaverton, for instance, school district officials decided that if students were to be life-long learners — one of the mandated competencies — they would have to develop plans to meet routine tasks, such as "finding jobs."

So students are asked to list information they will need to know to get jobs and explain where they can find the information and how they can learn it.

In Portland, for example, students are required to perform such tasks as filling out accident reports, writing advertisements for household objects, balancing checkbooks and listing tax-financed and private agencies to demonstrate reading, writing, computation and social responsibility skills.

If a student fails to meet the minimum competencies by graduation, the district will refuse to give him a diploma. Instead, he will get a certificate of competency listing whatever achievements he may have made, however slight.

There are also provisions for early graduation or extended schooling if the student desires. Most districts rely on teachers' observations to measure competencies but some, such as Portland, are experimenting with standardized written tests to help the teachers.

Teachers say the new requirements are forcing an improvement in secondary education.

Mrs. Susan Storms, a physical sciences teacher at Portland's Roosevelt School, said the competency-based approach had made her "more honest" with her students and less pedantic.

"We've thrown out a lot of garbage — our own biases — and now we're looking at what the kids need to know," she said.

Canned Food Kept Only A Year

New York (UPI) — Commercially-canned foods should be stored no longer than a year, says the consumer education department of Cornell University here. Longer storage will not spoil canned food, but it may lose color, flavor and nutritive value.

The cans should be kept at dry, moderately cool, but not freezing temperatures, away from radiators or kitchen ranges.

Open cans of food can be stored safely in the refrigerator, but acid products such as tomatoes and citrus juices will taste better if they are transferred to nonmetal containers. Acids can dissolve a little iron from open cans and, while it is not harmful, it may make the food taste metallic.

Clearing Project Finished

Louisville — A clearing and snagging project on about a mile of Mill Creek through the village of Louisville has been completed.

The work reduces the threat of flood damage in and adjacent to the Louisville business district by removing debris, brush and trees along the watercourse. During periods of high water flow, such objects can break loose and jam against bridges to obstruct the flow and cause flooding.

The clearing and snagging project was recommended as the first-priority flood control measure in a study completed for the village board last fall.

The Lower Platte South Natural Resources District (NRD) funded the project to the originally estimated $3,600 cost. Later deciding to extend the scope of the project, the village board used federal revenue sharing funds to pay the additional expense of approximately $1,400.

"This is a very basic and relatively inexpensive measure for controlling flooding in built-up areas," said Hal Schroeder, NRD general manager.

'74 Drought Still Danger To '75 Crops

By The Associated Press
Because Nebraska's subsoil never did recover from the drought that set in last July, crops this summer will be more susceptible to extended periods without rainfall, Ron Radenz of the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics, warned.
During the first week in July last year, subsoil moisture shortages jumped from 22% of the counties to 61%.
The surveys are taken by county agents in each of Nebraska's 93 counties. They make a subjective judgment on whether the moisture supply in their counties is adequate, surplus or short.
The shortage climbed the following week to 87% of the counties in the state. Now, 11 months later, subsoil moisture is still short in 69% of the counties.
Subsoil moisture serves as a reserve for plants to draw on during periods between rainfalls.
If rain does not come regularly, plants will have less of a reserve to draw on this year, Radenz said. That would leave the plants more susceptible than they were last year when much of the state's agricultural production burned in the warm winds, he added.

North Platte Sales Tax Killed

North Platte (AP) — The North Platte City Council unanimously rejected Tuesday night a proposal to establish a one-cent city sales tax.
The decision came late Tuesday night after 2½ hours of debate at a public hearing here.
Attorneys for the Downtown Merchants Association, representatives of two shopping centers, the local new car dealers association, farm implement dealers and small businessmen were among those opposing the action at the hearing.
In the crowd of over 100, no one spoke in favor of implementation of the tax.

Councilmen said the city will now have to operate at the maximum 25 mill property tax levy. Also, the council estimated that "budgets for some city departments may have to be slashed as much as 8% for the coming fiscal year."
Estimates of revenue from the sales tax had been about $900,000 per year and officials had said the property tax levy could be cut if the sales tax was approved.
However, opponents of the sales tax cited what they said was a substantially smaller amount generated by a local sales tax in the Omaha suburb of Bellevue.

They said Bellevue had been able to generate only $600,000 per year with a local sales tax, while having a population edge of approximately 10,000 persons over North Platte.
In the discussion of alternative methods of raising revenue for the city following the rejection of the sales tax proposal, the idea of a city lottery for North Platte was proposed, but no action was taken.

UNL Teams To Dig For Buried Treasure

The 11 persons from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln excavating sites in Dawes and Sioux counties this summer are looking for buried treasure, but it isn't silver or gold.

They are looking for fossils, the remains of animals that roamed Nebraska thousands of years ago and which one day may be displayed in the University of Nebraska State Museum.

One of the excavation projects will benefit farmers in Sioux County, said Robert M. Hunt Jr., associate curator of the museum. On this expedition, four graduate students are aiding him in geologically mapping the northern portion of the county, he said.

"Ranchers will be able to understand the geological framework of their land from the information we gather," Hunt said. "They will then be able to put their land to the best use, utilizing the data we have collected."

While the scientists will be mapping earth strata they also will be collecting fossils, Hunt said. The geologists will sift through sand and gravel for fossils as they map the area in a Sioux County quarry, he said.
Hunt said the researchers will not finish the excavation this summer.
"The quality of work depends on the amount of time a site is excavated," he explained. "To do a good job, a quarry may be worked for several seasons."
Another excavation in Sioux County will be made by three persons, including a husband and wife team of museum staff members Charles and Karen Messenger, preparators for the museum, will be digging for fossils near the South Dakota-Nebraska border.
The third excavation this summer will be made by Lloyd G. Tanner, coordinator of systematic collections at the museum. He will seek rhinoceros fossils near Crawford in Dawes County.
Hunt said that many times persons outside of the university aid NU scientists who are searching for fossils by giving them leads to sites containing the ancient material.
"People have been collecting fossils for over 100 years," Hunt said. "Many times they will bring material to us for identification. We then go to what appear to be the best localities for excavation."

House Fire Thought Set By Toddler

Madison (AP) — Playing with matches has been given as the probable cause of a fire that took the life of a Madison toddler Tuesday night.

Investigators said Philip Roggasch, 3, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Roggasch, died in a Norfolk hospital about 90 minutes after being burned in his parents' bedroom.

Asst. Fire Chief Jack Geary said Wednesday that an investigation by both state and local officials indicated that the child was playing with matches on a bed in his parents' bedroom.

Geary said Mrs. Roggasch discovered the fire after smelling smoke, but could not say why the child did not make a move to get away from the flames.
Damage from the fire was confined to the bed, Geary said, adding that it took firemen only seconds to extinguish the flames.

Gas Overcame Omaha Woman During Rescue

Omaha (UPI) — An Omaha woman was hospitalized in good condition Wednesday after police found her in a carbon-monoxide filled garage containing a car with her dead husband inside.

Police said Mrs. Alberta Grosbeck apparently was attempting to remove her husband, F.A. Grosbeck, 70, from behind the wheel of the car when she was overcome by fumes.

Police said they were summoned by neighbors who heard an outside intrusion alarm go off at the Grosbeck home. Grosbeck was found on the front seat of the car, and Mrs. Grosbeck on the garage floor.

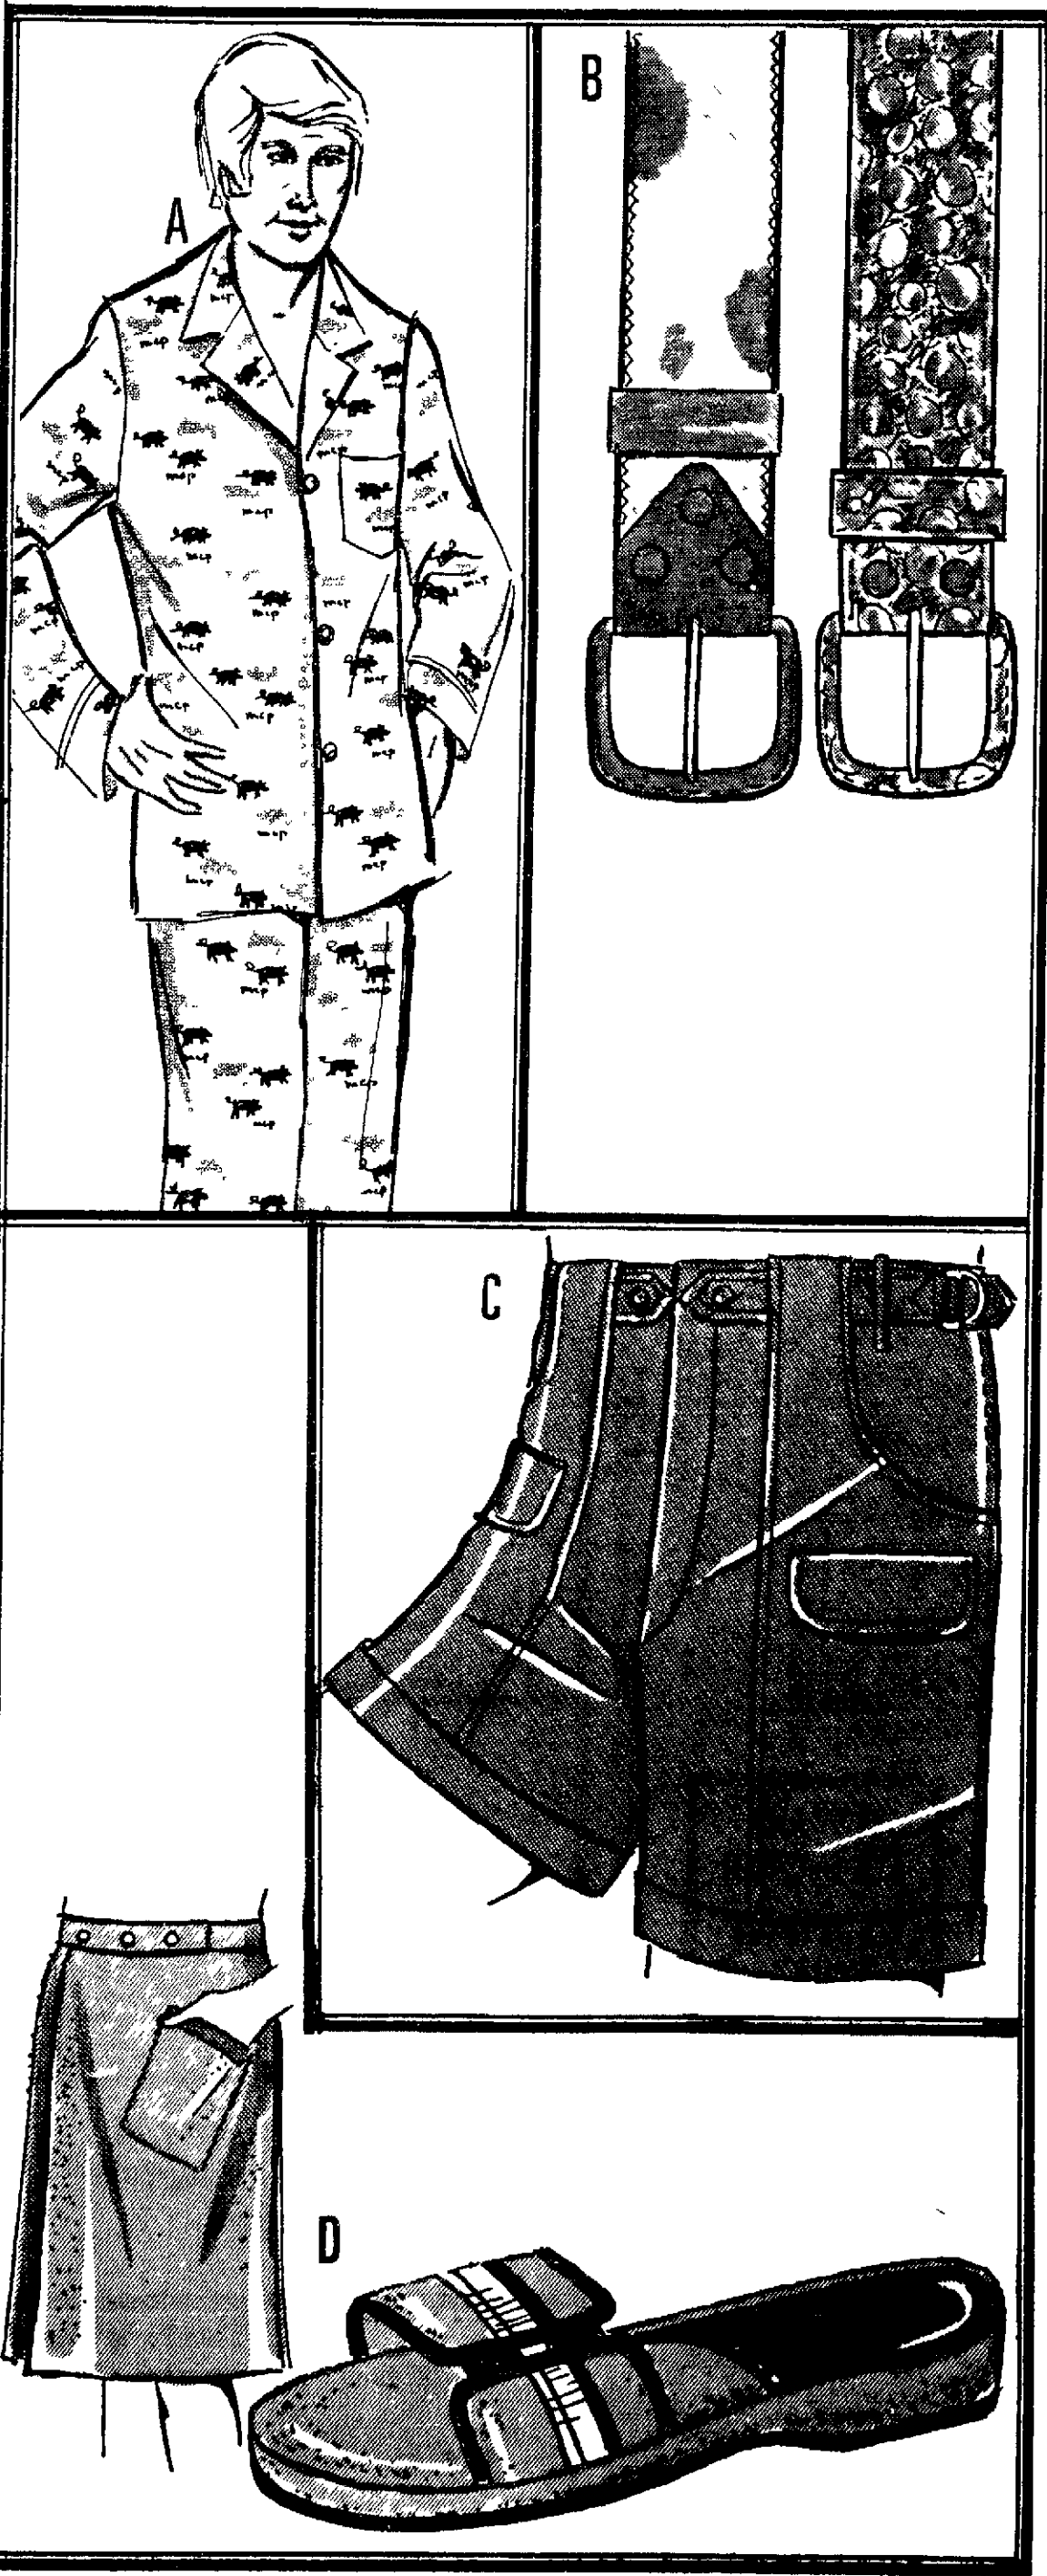

Police theorized Mrs. Grosbeck activated the alarm before she was overcome by the fumes.
Investigation was continuing.

Police Follow Trail Of Lead To Scrapper

Omaha (AP) — Omaha police have got a good leg up in the investigation of a rather big theft.
Earlier this week, officials of the Great Omaha Military Historical Society reported the theft of 49 submarine batteries.
The batteries, each weighing more than 400 pounds, were taken last month after they were removed from the sub, which is part of a ship display along the Missouri River.
The batteries were removed from the sub so maintenance crews could work on the craft.
Because each battery contains a large amount of lead, the salvage value is about $125 per battery.
Police said 39 of the batteries were found Tuesday in the yard of a local scrap metal firm.
An employee of the scrap company said the firm paid $743 for the batteries.
Police were told that a man made several trips to the firm over a two-week period in May.
The suspect was not immediately identified, but investigators are continuing their probe.

Food Bite Decreases

Washington (UPI) — Food costs are taking a smaller bite while taxes are taking a larger one out of personal income than they did seven years ago, according to Finance Facts, a newsletter of the National Consumer Finance Association.
About 16% of personal income goes for food, compared to 17% in 1965, while taxes now take 15%, up two points in the period, the association says.

More Oil Wells Drilled This Year

In its search for oil and natural gas, the petroleum industry completed a total of 71 wells in Nebraska during the first three months of 1975, the Nebraska Petroleum Council reported Wednesday.

Of this total, 52 were dry wells and 19 producing, all in the Panhandle area of southwestern Nebraska, the council said.

Charles E. Chace, executive director, said the total of 71 was an increase of 24 wells compared to the first quarter of 1974. The increase represented a gain of 51% over the comparable period a year ago.

Nationally, the petroleum industry completed a record 8,568 wells during the first quarter of 1975, Chace added. He said this was the best first quarter showing since the American Petroleum Institute began publishing drilling data in 1966. It represented an increase of 22% in drilling completions compared to the first three months of 1974.

Chace pointed out that in each of the past six quarters, drilling completions reported have shown an increase over the comparable quarters a year earlier. During those 18 months, he added, the U.S. petroleum industry has completed 47,988 wells, a gain of 17% over the 41,031 completed during the corresponding months a year earlier.

He warned, however, that higher taxes imposed on the industry, continued federal regulation of oil and natural gas prices, and declining profits for oil companies generally may put an end to the rising trend in drilling and thus make the U.S. even more dependent on foreign energy supplies.

Only Nine Persons Apply For Special Tornado Aid

Omaha (AP) — Only nine persons have applied for grants from a special relief fund, Mayor Edward Zorinsky said Wednesday.

The grants are available to victims of the devastating May 6 tornado whose losses were not covered by insurance, and who don't qualify for Small Business Administration (SBA) loans.

Applicants for the SBA loans must show that they will have the means to repay the low-interest loans.

A special, $3 million fund is available for tornado victims in financial trouble, but Zorinsky said he has been told that the number of applicants for some of the disaster money has been low.

The deadline for applications is July 6.

In the meantime, Zorinsky said he will soon announce his appointments to a 10-member tornado review commission.

The commission will hold hearings to determine what procedural changes should be made as the result of the May 6 disaster.

West Future At ABP Under Negotiation

By JON SWEET
Omaha (UPI) — Frank R. West, president and board chairman of American Beef Packers Inc., confirmed Wednesday his future at the firm is part of delicate negotiations underway in ABP's bankruptcy proceedings.

The negotiations are on two fronts — between ABP, the unsecured creditors committee, and General Electric Credit Corp., ABP's largest secured creditor, on a revised creditors payment plan and between ABP and GECC on West's future status.

West, 53, told UPI in an interview Wednesday that the two-pronged negotiations "go hand

Flood Zoning Rules Are Being Prepared

By The Associated Press
Many Nebraska communities are anxious for the Department of Water Resources to compile and release regulations governing construction on floodways and floodplains.

The department, under Director M. E. Ball, has been working on regulations called for in LB108. The law, passed by the last Legislature, is hopefully aimed at blocking Army Corps of Engineers efforts to take control of the Platte River and its tributaries.

The law applies to floodways that did not previously have floodway and floodplain zoning plans approved by the Natural Resource Commission.

The law gives the commission power over all Nebraska water courses. The commission must approve construction of almost all structures that would be in a floodplain or floodway.

"Currently, we are putting out information on a tentative basis," Ball said Wednesday.

Saunders School Issue Approved

Wahoo — A $125,000 bond issue to provide improvements for the Saunders County School District 11 schoolhouse won approval of voters in a special election Tuesday. The unofficial tally was 61 to 38, according to the Saunders County clerk's office. The schoolhouse, built about 60 years ago, is located one mile south of the junction of U.S. 77 and Highway 109, south of Fremont. Plans call for an addition to the present structure.

Northeast Site Chosen For Civic Center

Hastings (UPI) — A study commission for a proposed $5 million to $10 million civic center here has rejected the Adams County fairgrounds as a possible building site and selected an area at the northeast corner of this south central Nebraska city. The fairgrounds, which had been offered as a gift, was rejected because the Burlington Northern Railroad tracks separate the fairgrounds from a heavily populated area of Hastings. On a 7-4 vote, the commission selected an area south of the intersection of U.S. 281 and the U.S. 281 bypass. The site also was donated to the city and county for the project. Plans call for a recreation center, a convention center and a performing arts hall to be included.

Loup Customers Pay Below Average

Columbus (UPI) — A "mini" 1974 annual report of the Loup Power District indicates the district's customers pay 34% less than the national average for their electricity. Loup's residential customers last year paid an average of 1.86 cents per kilowatt hour of energy consumed, the report showed, which was 34% less than the national average of 2.83 cents per kwh. The report also showed the counties and municipalities within Loup's district received nearly $500,000 in financial benefits. Of the amount, $227,350 went to municipalities in payments under the retail service agreement and $126,828 went to the counties as payments for in-lieu-of-tax payments.

Girls National Delegates Chosen

Girls State ended Wednesday with the announcement of representatives who will go on to Girls Nation next month in Washington, D.C. The two chosen are Marianne Vermeer of North Platte and Valerie Morrow of Omaha. Alternates are Beth Fictner of Maywood and Charlotte Conner of Omaha.

Robinson Charged In Macy Death

Omaha (AP) — A Macy man has been charged with manslaughter in connection with a fatal traffic accident last week on the Omaha Indian Reservation at Macy. Asst. U.S. Atty. Thomas Thalken said Charles Robinson, 46, has been charged in connection with the death of Ester Porter, 53, also of Macy. She died June 3 of injuries she suffered when the car she was riding in slammed into a parked vehicle in front of the Tribal Council Building in Macy. Robinson was the driver of the car, and is now being held in Pender. The complaint against Robinson said an empty wine bottle was found in the auto, and described Robinson as being "highly intoxicated" when he was taken to the hospital after the mishap. Robinson has also been charged with drunk driving, Thalken said.

compromise plan to GECC this week calling, in substance, for him to leave the top post, but remain with ABP in a yet uncertain capacity.

Precisely what is the revised creditors arrangement plan is uncertain, but sources have told UPI "substantial progress" has been made toward achieving a workable proposal.

West intimates have told UPI that the former meat packing baron felt like a "bombshell" was dropped on him during the Stamford meeting. He reportedly told a cattle feeder on the creditors committee that "Whatever you guys do, I want to see you paid. Don't worry about me."

Livestock feeders were left holding some $25 million of the $30 million in outstanding ABP debts when the meatpacking giant filed limited bankruptcy in U.S. District Court in Omaha Jan. 7.

The intensiveness of the negotiations was the prime reason ABP, GECC and creditors committee attorneys requested an extension of court proceedings in Omaha Wednesday. Bankruptcy Judge David Crawford delayed until July 16 the time for the hearing on ABP's revised creditors payment plan and on the question of consolidating ABP debts with those of its wholly owned subsidiary, Beefland International, Inc., of Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Crawford further ordered the revised plan to be on file by July 7, but an agreement, in substance, on the plan, originally rejected by the creditors committee, may come later this week.

The creditors committee made a deal with the state of Nebraska and Iowa and the federal Securities and Exchange Commission to postpone a receivership hearing that was originally scheduled for June 4 to next Monday.

The two states and the SEC are seeking a receiver with unlimited powers to replace West and thoroughly shake up ABP's management and board structure.

Pardon Board Slates Hearing For Murderer

The State Board of Pardons will hold a commutation hearing June 30 for James Howard Hunter of Lincoln who was given two consecutive life sentences for the 1964 slaying of his wife and mother-in-law.

Commutation would eventually make him eligible for parole from the sentences imposed for the two convictions of second degree murder.

Ford Campaign Job Rejected By Herman

Omaha (AP) — Omaha businessman Richard Herman announced he has declined to consider a key post in President Ford's 1976 election campaign because of business pressures.

"I was one of those asked if the position was to be offered, would I be able to take the time," Herman said.

Herman, 54, president of a petroleum trucking firm with offices in six states, resigned in January as Nebraska Republican national committeeman. He cited increased business responsibilities as reasons.

Herman said the Ford job would have involved extensive travel throughout the United States to contact potential delegates for the Republican National Convention. The offer, he said, was made by a White House adviser.

Herman said he will remain active in a group of political advisers aiding Ford in campaign matters, particularly on procedures required of announced candidates under the new campaign financing law.

Stockgrowers Gather For Convention

By DONALD COSTELLO
Farm Editor
North Platte — Members of the Nebraska Stockgrowers Association began gathering here Wednesday for their annual three-day convention.

While ranchers discuss every aspect of the livestock industry, their wives will meet at the Nebraska Cow-Belles to work on beef promotion schemes, and their youngsters will hold their own meeting as the Junior Stockgrowers. More than 600 ranch families are expected to attend before the convention ends Friday. Most of Wednesday afternoon was spent in committee meetings that will produce resolutions to be processed by the resolution committee for consideration Friday by all the members. Included among the more important issues were education, marketing procedures and a proposal for a national check-off program to fund beef promotion. Dr. Anne Campbell, state commissioner of education, met with the education committee to discuss the problems of operating schools in sparsely settled ranch areas, state aid to education and school reorganization problems. The marketing committee is working on a proposal that would involve the complete restructuring of the packers and stockyards administration, the federal regulatory agency that governs livestock marketing. A major issue facing the marketing committee is a national check-off program to collect funds each time an animal is sold to be used for promoting beef sales throughout the nation and possibly for research programs. On Friday the stockgrowers will hear from Third District Rep. Virginia Smith, R-Neb., and Second District Rep. John McCollister, R-Neb., who has announced intentions to run for the U.S. Senate.

Nebraska Cow Belles are hosting their national president, Mrs. Don Ater of Ferriday, La. Mrs. Ater operates both registered and commercial cow herds with the help of her five children and grows 5,000 acres of crops. She is also involved in a trailer sales business and is chairman of the board of a bank. Many non-ranchers are present seeking to introduce new products to the cattlemen or seeking their support for political or promotional ideas. Ed Collins, a cattle buyer and broadcaster from Red Oak, Iowa, was on hand Wednesday seeking support for a nationwide beef promotional effort which he said "will drive imported beef right off the shelf."

Collins told his listeners they need to get more Nebraska beef sold. "Don't say eat beef, say eat Nebraska beef. Beef should be sold like wine, by the area it comes from and by its reputation," he said. Collins is seeking a dozen or more college-age people from cattle areas to join him in an extended tour in populated areas in eastern states. The group will put on barbecuing demonstrations, emphasizing the value of grain fed beef.

Gasohol May Be All Sold Soon

Holdrege (UPI) — A member of the state committee which began about two weeks ago a one-year consumer acceptance test of gasohol said Wednesday the blended fuel was selling so well the test may be over before the end of the year. Holly Hodge of Holdrege, a member of the Agricultural Products Industrial Utilization Committee created by the 1971 Legislature, said the Co-op service station here was selling 1,200 gallons per day, gobbling up the committee's first 20,000 gallon allotment and consuming its second and final 20,000 gallons. He said the service station may run out of the unleaded gasoline-grain alcohol blended fuel by the end of June. The fuel is a blend of 90% unleaded gasoline and 10% grain alcohol that is selling for the same price as unleaded gasoline. Charles Fricke, committee administrator, said the response had been "fantastic and somewhat shocking." He said, "Our plan was to test consumer acceptance, and apparently it has been overwhelming." He said the committee was scheduled to meet June 27 to discuss the success of the test and to determine whether it should continue. Fricke said he also had been contacted by 20 other states about the program.

Further Grain Cutbacks Eyed

Hildreth (UPI) — A leader of a grass-roots movement to cut back the number of grain acres planted this year Wednesday said members of the Nebraska Wheat Growers Association planned to adopt a similar policy for next year's crops. Harold Burger of Hildreth, a member of the "20% Producers," said his group's efforts this past winter were successful in encouraging corn planting cutbacks. He said firm figures would not be available until July when the U.S. Agriculture Department's first crop production report is available, but he estimated 400,000 acres were not planted this year because of the movement.

Holly Hodge of Holdrege, past president of the Nebraska Wheat Producers, said no decision had been made on a proposal to encourage a cutback in plantings next year. However, he said something must be done to insure wheat producers a stable price, stopping short of ruling out the cutback technique. Hodge said the wheat growers meet in Ogallala on Monday, and he said the issue will be discussed. He said the state producers were waiting for direction from the national organization. Burger said the 20% Producers had aimed at a 20% cutback in this year's plantings, but he said he felt the group was successful in getting a 10 or 15% response. He said the group had three million acres signed up for the cutback program in Nebraska, with possibly 400,000 actually held out of grain production. He said the grass-roots movement would continue next year, and, he said, his contacts in Iowa and other states indicated it would be nationwide. Burger also said a meeting was scheduled in early July with Iowa producers to review the USDA crop figures to determine how successful the group had been this year.

Man Hurt In Copter Crash

Neigh (AP) — One man was injured Wednesday afternoon when his helicopter crashed in a farm field about 5 1/2 miles southeast of here. The pilot of the craft, which was owned by the Union Oil Co., of Neigh, was identified as Jerry Miller, about 40. Miller told investigators he was on a crop dusting run when the sun obscured his vision as he came out from behind a cloud.

Mellerdrammer Tryouts Open

Theatre Inc. of Lincoln will hold open tryouts for its third Mellerdrammer of the season, "Labors of Love," from 7 to 9 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at the Gas Light Theatre, 322 S. 9th St. "Labors of Love" has parts for six women and five men. The production is a musical which will open at the Theatre July 9 and continue through Aug. 2.

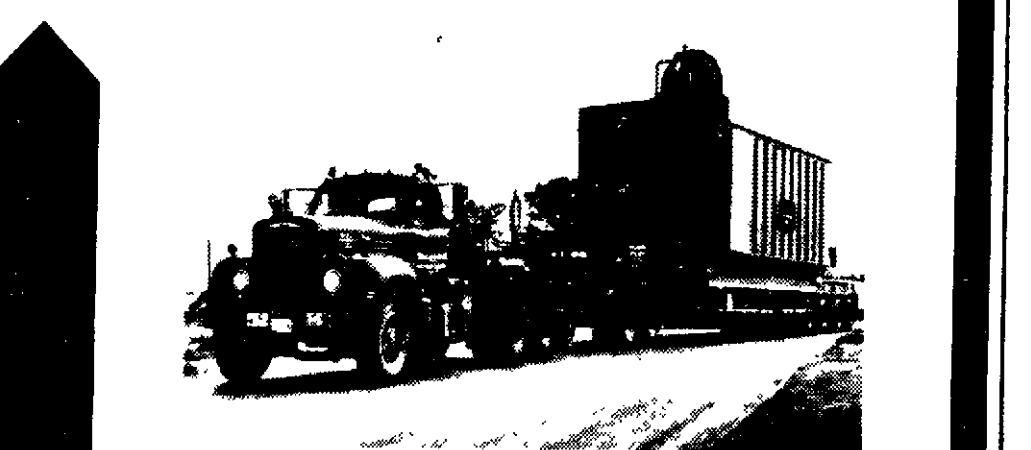

The helicopter hit some power lines, then crashed to the ground. Miller was taken to a hospital here, where he was listed in satisfactory condition while undergoing treatment for back injuries and facial lacerations. Portions of Elgin and Tilden were without power for about three hours as a result of the crash.

Gambling Arrests Made Following 15-Day Wiretap

Omaha (UPI) — Five Omahans, who authorities have said were once part of one of the largest illegal bookie operations in the nation, have been arrested again following a 15-day wiretap on two Omaha telephones.

Lt. Jack Swanson of the police vice and narcotics unit said police sought a wiretap court order about three weeks ago, and presiding Douglas County District Judge James Buckley authorized it on a telephone at an apartment occupied by John J. Salanitro, 43, and on a pay telephone.

Salanitro, Max "Little Giant" Abramson, 66, Ross J. "Soddy" Dimairo, 42, Wayne V. Wornochil, 42, and Paul J. Cappellano Jr., 44, face charges of taking illegal wagers on horse racing at Ak-Sar-Ben and other race tracks, Swanson said.

All five are awaiting U.S. District Court trials on charges of federal gambling violations. At the time of the federal indictments in April, then U.S. Atty. William K. Schaphorst said the indictments involved one of the largest illegal bookmaking operations in the United States.

The Municipal Court charges were filed Tuesday by City Prosecutor Gary Buccino.

In addition, Swanson said a sixth man was arrested on suspicion of providing gambling facilities. He was allegedly the renter of the apartment used by Salanitro.

Hastings Union Excluding 7 Employees From Dispute

Attorneys for the City of Hastings and the Communications Workers of America, AFL-CIO, have agreed to excluding certain employees from a representation dispute, according to documents on file with the State Court of Industrial Relations.

A stipulation signed by attorneys for both the city and the labor union agreed that seven employees in particular would not be involved.

At bar is a union attempt to be designated as the exclusive

The seven specifically excluded from the action included William Belz, power plant superintendent; LaVerne Felzien, office manager; John Foster, utilities manager; Lee Malone, gas superintendent; D. R. Rhodes, operations director; Henry Theesen, water and sewer superintendent; and Everett Uhrich, electricity distribution supervisor.

The industrial court originally ordered that a trial be held in the dispute on May 15. But continuances were granted and as yet a new trial date has not been set.

The dispute was filed with the court in February.

San Francisco -- On the sunny streets of Sausalito, hippies hippety-hopped in and out of stores selling astrology books and water beds. Dogs trotted down the sidewalk on purposeful errands. The hamburger stand was fragrant of mustard and pickles.

Beside the fountain in the tiny square a young man with beard and love beads, put his ear to his guitar. Drawing out notes that only he could hear.

Warm summer has come to the Northern California coast.

In the village barber shop, the long-haired barber asked me "Not too short?"

He then gave me a trim like a boot camp Marine. Cut me off at Generation Gap. You can let your hair grow to the shoulders. But they know. They know.

For a couple of months now, my witchy hairdresser let my hair grow over the back of my collar. She blew my hair up with a hot blower. She tried to get more cover on the top with dressings of rare Aztec herbs.

Each week I sat under the dryer, reading old copies of Vogue. Ladies under the other dryers got used to me, probably thinking I was gay as Saturday night.

The hair grew longer on the ends. But on top it looked like a wheat field during a drought year. Too late for love beads and beards -- hair too short lived too long.

On the hard rock streets of the hard rock town, there's a store that sells jeweled dog collars. Red leather inlaid with brilliants.

I used to wear a traction dog collar myself. It kept my head from swiveling while I got over some yoga exercises. A yoga girl said it was because I didn't do it with the right words.

She said "You must have your personal mantra."

The mantra is a set of words from India. If you get a guru, he tailors a mantra to your personal needs.

If I had known about the dog collar shop, I could have had my traction collar decorated with emeralds. Butterfly designs with ruby eyes.

Not having a personal mantra, I could only recite Senator George Vest's "Eulogy to a Dog."

The senator spoke before the Johnson County Circuit Court at Warrensburg, Mo. The memorable date was September 23, 1870, and he said:

"The only absolutely unselfish friend that man can have in this selfish world, the one that never deserts him, the one that never proves ungrateful or treacherous, is his dog."

Never learned why the senator said this, though I can recite it by heart. When I was wearing the traction collar, my back hair hung over it like an English sheep dog's.

Possibly the senator was defending a dog who couldn't hire a paid lawyer. The Johnny Nabs put the dog up against the wall and read him his Miranda rights.

"You have a right to remain silent. If you cannot afford an attorney, one will be appointed for you."

If the senator was defending his dog, the record doesn't show whether he got him sprung or if the dog landed in the moan-and-wail.

The barber held up a mirror. He said "How's that?" I looked a little raw after two months of the shaggies.

So ended my era of hippeting. My time of yoga and mantras. Of wheat germ, unrefined sugar and health bread. Of astrological forecasts. (I have Mars square Venus which gives me emotional fits at times.)

Samson is shorn. So into the sunlit streets, light-headed.

Institutions Understaffed
... Doctor Says

CHICAGO (AP) — Some state hospitals would have no doctors at all if they did not hire foreign physicians who have not passed American qualifying examinations, spokesmen for foreign doctors say.

Because of bad working conditions and low pay, such state institutions as those for the criminally insane would be greatly understaffed if they could not hire foreign medical graduates, said Edward Smith, executive director of the Foreign Medical Graduates Association — FMG — with headquarters in Atlanta.

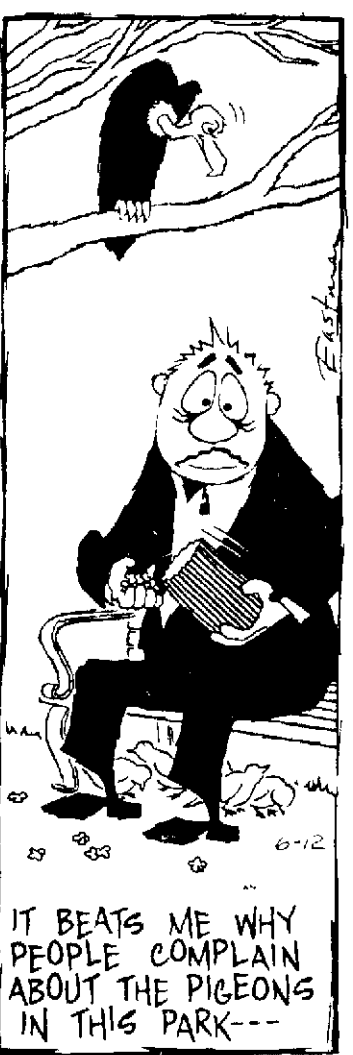

Fifteen states permit employment of unlicensed doctors in state institutions.

There are now 75 000 foreign physicians in the United States, and 65 000 are licensed to practice here. Smith said. Three thousand others are certified interns and only 7 000 are unlicensed, he added.

Many of the unlicensed doctors are nevertheless qualified to practice medicine in the United States, says Dr. Kishore Thampy, now a Chicago psychiatrist active in the FMG. He said many don't immediately pass qualifying exams in the United States because their English is poor or they need additional training in some special area.

Jose Serrato, a Columbus, Ga., orthopedic surgeon from Mexico who is president of the association, said no one can argue that foreign doctors who have not passed qualifying or licensure examinations are not employed in state hospitals.

WANTED: One Diplomat To Oversee Consolidation

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Staff Staff Writer

The City-County Implementation Commission (CCIC) began its search Wednesday for a person with that magic touch who will ease the way for eventual city-county consolidation.

The CCIC asked the City Personnel Department to advertise nation-wide for a person to fill the CCIC coordinator's post, a job which will pay between $20,000 and $24,000 a year.

CCIC members believe the job will be necessary for at least two years. They figure it will take at least that long for many of the recommended changes to be initiated.

On City Payroll

The CCIC placed the coordinator on the city payroll, only so that the person will receive fringe benefits. The last joint employee hired by the city and county, the human services administrator, was placed on the county payroll.

The coordinator will be responsible to the CCIC, a five-member body set up to oversee merger efforts. Members are Mayor Helen Boosalis, County Board Chairman Jan Gauger, City Council Chairman Max Denney, County Atty. Ron Lahners and Jack Thompson, representing the Lincoln Foundation.

The committee set a maximum budget for the coordinator, secretarial help and other expenses at $35,000. It will be up to the City Council and County Board to fork over the money.

Screening Asked
The committee asked the personnel office to screen the applicants and to forward the most qualified names back to the committee for interviews. CCIC members hope to hire a coordinator by Sept. 1.

The officials, knowing that the coordinator will require office space and knowing there isn't much space to give in the crowded County-City Building, did the only appropriate thing—they passed the buck. The group asked the Building Commission to find office space for them.

The CCIC is looking for someone who will be able to work with various city and county officials, task forces and citizens to see that consolidation recommendations are put into motion.

'Difficult Situations'
Realizing that the job may be unpopular with some officials who view consolidation as an attempt to take away their authority, the CCIC said the coordinator needs to have the ability "to handle difficult situations diplomatically."

In other business, the CCIC asked city and county department heads to make sure their budget requests include money for any necessary changes required to carry out merger activities. The county's fiscal year begins in July and the city's in September.

Check Altering Results In Term Of 3 To 6 Years

O'Neill (UPI) — Lloyd Wayne Allen, 28, who is from Texas, was sentenced to three to six years Wednesday in the Nebraska Penal Complex after pleading guilty to altering a bank draft.

Allen, alias Ted Hale, was accused of altering a check for $6.75 to $6,250.

He had been posing as a lighting rod manufacturer's representative inspecting installed rods. After he received a check for his services, he changed the figure on the check.

He has similar charges pending against him in several states, authorities said. Presiding judge at Allen's sentencing in Holt County District Court was Judge L. W. Kelley, Jr. of Hall County District Court. Henry Reimer, the judge for the 15th Judicial District, disqualified himself because he had been involved in bringing charges against Allen.

Man Arraigned On Rape Charge

A 26-year-old Lincoln man was arraigned in Lancaster County Court Wednesday afternoon on charges of raping a 38-year-old woman.

A preliminary hearing for Steven McCoy was set for June 27 and bond was set at $2,500. McCoy was charged with rape in connection with an early Tuesday morning incident in a Lincoln house. McCoy allegedly entered the home and raped a woman in front of a 3-year-old boy, according to police reports.

Duck! Eggs Target Of Stand-In Shooter

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

It's no yolk — the Lancaster County Sheriff's Department walked off with a shooting match trophy with a little help from ducks' eggs.

The fourth annual Blue Rock Shooting Match with five-man teams from the Sheriff's Department, the Lincoln Police and the Nebraska State Patrol was scheduled for Tuesday night.

But the best shot and captain of the sheriff's office team — Sgt. Edwin Kringle — was sick with the flu.

So the department called on a replacement, Deputy David Halverstadt. Halverstadt was leery; he hadn't shot for more than a year. But he agreed to help out.

Halverstadt, who raises ducks, spent Tuesday afternoon practicing his shooting. His wife threw duck eggs up in the air and he picked them off.

"You want to be sure that the eggs are not above you when you shoot," Halverstadt reportedly said.

When match time came, Halverstadt shot 25 out of 25 rocks and the department team took the trophy with a total of 104 points out of a possible 125.

The sheriff's department lost the tournament the second year, but has won three out of the four annual matches, Sheriff Merle Karnopp said.

If they win again next year — for four years in a row — they will get to keep the massive trophy permanently, Karnopp said.

Regular members of the shooting team are Kringle, Sgt. Mel Green and Deputies George Lahners and Howard Cleckner.

Recall Scrapped; Tests Unreliable

DETROIT (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency has scrapped a campaign to recall 1.4 million 1972-model cars for federal pollution violations, revealing its original test results were unreliable.

The recall, involving cars built by General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and Volkswagen, would have been the largest ever under the federal agency's authority to enforce compliance of clean air standards.

An EPA spokesman in Washington said Wednesday letters were sent to the auto companies last week, notifying them that plans to recall the vehicles were canceled because of discrepancies in test data.

The auto companies, which disputed the findings of clean air violations, had threatened to challenge any recall by the agency. The spokesman said if it ever went to court, EPA probably would lose.

The EPA told the companies of the possible recall last June after the agency analyzed laboratory test results in five cities of 2,400 cars representing 24 engine classes. The tests were conducted by private contractors in Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Detroit, St. Louis and Atlanta.

The tests indicated violations by GM's 350-cubic-inch Oldsmobiles, Volkswagen's 96.6-cubic-inch Beetle, Ford's 400-cubic-inch engine class and Chrysler's 360- and 400-cubic-inch engine lines.

The tests were taken between 4,000 and 50,000 miles of auto use. The findings indicated between 39 per cent and 75 per cent of the car lines may be in violation of federal standards.

Richard Kozlowski, an official in the EPA's enforcement division, said the agency found test cars may not have been properly maintained during their field use as required. He also said some of the testing equipment may not have been properly calibrated.

Man Claims Powder Puff Derby Sexist

Los Angeles (AP) — Howard Rosen says the annual all-woman, cross-country Powder Puff Derby flying race is "arbitrary, irrational and sexist," and is asking a court to outlaw the ban on male flyers.

Rosen, a real estate broker and flying enthusiast, said in a lawsuit he applied to enter the race but officials did not include his name because he was a man.

The Powder Puff Derby begins July 4 at Riverside, Calif., Municipal Airport and ends in the Midwest three days later. Contestants fly light planes.

FPC Head Quits

Washington (AP) — A resignation of John N. Nassukas as chairman of the Federal Power Commission was accepted Wednesday by President Ford.

Agreement Told

Hong Kong (AP) — The Soviet Union has agreed to supply Vietnam with emergency shipments of fuel, fertilizer, food and vehicles, Hanoi's official Vietnam News Agency reported.

At Least It's Fun For Kids

The gym floor in Chicago's Christopher House was straight and level — until a water pipe burst. The pipe was under the floor. When the water dried, the floor was wavy like the sea.

Repair costs promise to be high, but in the meantime children found out what fun it can be to try out skate boards on the roller coaster-like floor.

HEW To Pay For Refugee Welfare

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government acknowledged Wednesday that some Vietnamese refugees will be unable to support themselves and will be forced to sign up for welfare payments.

Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger of Health Education and Welfare emphasized, however, that he expects most of the 131,528 Vietnamese refugees to be resettled with the help of American sponsors who are to provide housing and jobs.

Weinberger said HEW will reimburse the states for welfare payments to both Vietnamese and Cambodian refugees now moving from four camps in California, Arkansas, Florida and Pennsylvania to new homes around the country. There are comparatively few Cambodian refugees.

There was no estimate available of how many refugees might end up on the welfare rolls, but California officials reported Wednesday they have begun payment benefits to 200 Vietnamese during the six weeks since the first refugees arrived on U.S. soil. An HEW spokesman estimated $50 million in federal funds will go for refugees welfare payments.

Weinberger said the states would also be reimbursed when public funds were used to pay major medical bills of refugees. In that case, refugees not on welfare would be eligible for federal assistance for major medical costs.

Wishing Well

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or out your number. Subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 2. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Football Bowl Business To Change

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

The college football bowl business will be "a whole new ball game" in 1975 as a result of the apparent decision of the Big Ten and Pacific-8 Conferences to permit more than one team to accept a post-season game.

"It will give the bowl people more teams to consider, that's for sure," Big Eight Conference commissioner Chuck Neinas said Wednesday. "Obviously it will have some effect on the present bowl situation."

Neinas said he isn't surprised at the move, which he said the Big Ten and Pacific-8 have been working on for quite a while. Previously, only the champions of the two leagues were allowed in post-season play and then only could compete in the Rose Bowl game.

"Won't records and ratings determine the desirability of selecting teams for bowls," Neinas said. The fact more teams now will be available will make non-conference games even more important than they have been in previous years.

The Big Eight had its "glory years" in the 1971 and 1972 seasons which produced five bowl teams for the first year and four the second year. Only Nebraska played in a bowl after the 1973 season and only the Huskers and Oklahoma State earned bids after last season.

While the Big Eight will be affected to some extent, the most seriously affected league is expected to be the Southeastern, which last year put seven of its ten members in post-season play.

There were four from the Southwest, three from the Atlantic Coast, two independents, and Miami of Ohio from the Mid-American Conference in the 11 sanctioned bowls which invited Division I teams.

Under the Big Ten's plan, the second, third and fourth place finishers will be eligible to accept bids to bowls the conference approves.

A second place finisher, however, must be invited prior to acceptance by a third place finisher and a third place team will have to be invited prior to acceptance by the No. 4 team.

One stipulation of the new plan rules out play in any bowl game played prior to Dec. 26. This, in effect, precludes participation in such contests at the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl, which was played Dec. 23 last year, the Liberty Bowl, which was played Dec. 16, and the Tangerine Bowl, which was Dec. 21.

It does leave Big Ten and Pacific-8 teams available for the Cotton, Fiesta, Gator, Orange, Peach, Rose, Sugar and Sun Bowls.

One report has it that the two leagues have informally approached the Hula Bowl sponsor in Hawaii about changing their game from an all-star contest to one which would send the runner-up teams to Honolulu.

Wiles Hallock, executive director of the Pacific-8, said Wednesday his league's Council "substantially favors" participation in other bowls. Even though no meeting is scheduled until December, Hallock said ratification could come through either a mail vote or conference telephone call.

"Throughout all of our joint discussions with the Big Ten and the Tournament of Roses, whatever action we take in regard to participation in other games shall not in any way detract from the stature of the Rose Bowl," Hallock said.

"People from both conferences have discussed the current matter thoroughly with Tournament of Roses football and executive committees and they are reconciled to a probable change in policy," he added.

Walter Hoefflin, a spokesman for the Tournament of Roses, said his organization has been discussing the change with the Big Ten since last January and that Don Canham, Michigan athletic director, has been to Pasadena talking with the Tournament of Roses group.

Michigan has been shut out of post-season games the past three years despite a 30-2-1 composite record. Ohio State won the Big Ten title in 1972 and 1973 and the conference athletic directors gave the nod to the Buckeyes last season when the league race ended in a tie for the title.

Melee 'Part Of Baseball'

DETROIT (AP) — "This is part of baseball," insisted umpire Marty Springstead. "They get their dander up. Nobody got hurt as a result."

Indeed, the Detroit Tigers and California Angels did get their dander up Wednesday night. And nobody really got hurt. But the way the two benches cleared for a fourth-inning melee during the opener of their doubleheader it seemed certain somebody would get popped pretty good.

The Angels later did their hitting with their bats and blasted the Tigers 14-7 in the free-swinging affair.

The incident began when muscular Tiger designated hitter Willie Horton charged after Angel pitcher Frank Tanana after Tanana had fired an inside pitch to him leading off the fourth.

Before things calmed down, Tiger Manager Ralph Houk and umpire Larry Barnett were shoved to the ground, Angel pitcher Dick Lange got scratched. Angel catcher Elie Rodriguez was shoved around, and about half a dozen others were involved in one way or another in the wild donnybrook. "Willie kept saying 'I'm gonna kill you. I'm gonna kill you,' to anybody and everybody," said second base umpire Barnett.

Springstead, the plate umpire, said Horton pushed him and catcher Rodriguez aside when he went after Tanana.

"I decided for peace of the game it was best to give Willie a rest," he said, adding later, "Can you imagine what would have happened if we kept Horton in there and a pitch was in the general area of the other one. You'd have needed the National Guard out there."

Tanana said he wasn't throwing at Horton but he wanted to pitch him in tight.

"I'll tell you one thing you can't do. The next time you go to the mound you can't pitch any differently."

Tanana said Horton poked him several times with his finger "and said something like 'You're too young to be messing with me."

"The last thing you want to do is get Willie Horton mad," said Tanana, who admired Horton while growing up in Detroit.

Another Horton admirer was Lange, of Harbor Beach, Mich., who said he was grabbed around the neck by Houk while trying to keep Horton away from Tanana. He said Houk fell and scratched him as Angels coach Whitey Herzog was pulling Houk away.

That was during the initial bench clearing. Both benches and bullpens cleared again moments later after Horton was ejected and Tanana resumed his spot on the mound. During the second tangle, Horton grabbed Lange by the coat, Lange said.

"Willie found me and said, 'Do you want to fool with me?'" Lange explained. "I said, 'No! No!'" Horton scared me but Houk scratched me a little bit."

California Angels Manager Dick Williams had a tough time herding his players back to the dugout both times. He tried getting Tanana way soonest.

"I believe they thought I was the spark and if they got me out of sight things would calm down," Tanana said.

Williams said the best way to get Horton out is with inside breaking pitches about belt high.

"We weren't throwing at him and the ball didn't hit him," Williams said.

Springstead said he would not recommend any type of suspension in his report to American League President Lee MacPhail.

Newsmen were not permitted in the Tiger dressing room after the first game and there was no immediate comment from Horton or Houk.

ASU leftfielder Ken Phelps brought the Sun Devils to within two runs in the bottom of the sixth when he powered a towering 380-foot drive over the right-center wall.

But that was all the damage that ASU could do against Bass in the last eight innings as the fastballer allowed only four hits from the second until the ninth inning.

"Earl (Bass) pitched a heck of a ball game," said USC coach Bobby Richardson. "He made me look good."

"He gave up runs early, but he didn't give up," said Richardson. "He's the kind of pitcher who can hold them in check and give us a chance to come back."

Bass said although he felt a little nervous he wasn't really worried. "With a team like ours, I know that in time we'll get the runs. And that's a great feeling for a pitcher to have," he said.

"I pulled my muscle in the eighth when I went for a hopper over the mound but it feels okay now," Bass said. "Everything feels good when you win."

Richardson said the key plays were a triple by Keatley and a squeeze bunt by Van Bever. "It made me feel really good to see a second baseman (Keatley) take my sign for the bunt when he had two strikes on him. I kind of expected he would give me a double take and go ahead and swing away."

"We're the kind of club that makes things happen. And tonight we made it happen for us," Richardson said of his club now 50-4-1.

Thursday night, South Carolina will face Texas at 8 p.m. Richardson said he would start right-hander Greg Ward, 14-2, against the Longhorn's ace Jim Gideon.

"Tonight, we faced the best club we've faced all year but we know that Texas and Oklahoma are also great teams," Richardson said.

In the 5 p.m. game Arizona State, now 60-12, will face Oklahoma.

"Greg Cochran will pitch for us against Oklahoma's Bob Shurley," said ASU coach Jim Brock.

"After a loss, you always reevaluate your lineup, and I may make a change or two for tomorrow's game, but I'm not sure," Brock said.

"Floyd Bannister had an off night tonight," Brock said, "but there's no way you can get down on him."

"He has pitched better in the last six weeks than anyone else in the country," Brock said, "but he just didn't have it tonight."

"Apparently it took something out of him to warm up last night and get ready, and then have to come back tonight," Brock said.

Bass, Gamecocks Hit Arizona State

By KEN HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer
Omaha — South Carolina right-hander Earl Bass worked his way out of trouble in the first inning and went on to lead the Fighting Gamecocks to a 6-3 win over Arizona State in the College World Series before 10,902 at Rosenblatt Stadium here Wednesday night.

The Sun Devils tagged Bass, now 17-0, for two runs in the first inning, when with two outs, Garrett Strong singled in Tom Sain and Ken Landreaux.

Bass walked the next batter but forced the following Sun Devil to pop out to the catcher to end the inning.

Arizona State starting pitcher Floyd Bannister then took care of holding the lead, striking out five batters in the first three innings and allowing only one infield hit.

But the Gamecocks, the only undefeated team left in the series, tied the game in the fourth when catcher Greg Keatley tripled to right-center bringing in Steve King and Jim Pankovits.

Keatley then scored on a beautiful bunt down the third base line by Mark Van Bever, who scored from second on an error by the ASU second baseman, to give South Carolina a 4-2 lead.

Keatley drove in another run in the sixth when he plated Steve Cook, who doubled, with a single.

ASU leftfielder Ken Phelps brought the Sun Devils to within two runs in the bottom of the sixth when he powered a towering 380-foot drive over the right-center wall.

But that was all the damage that ASU could do against Bass in the last eight innings as the fastballer allowed only four hits from the second until the ninth inning.

Dibbs' Rally Upsets Foe

PARIS (UPI) — America's Eddie Dibbs twice came back from 0-4 set deficits Wednesday to win a roller-coaster five-set battle with Mexico's Raul Ramirez and a berth in the semifinals of the $218,000 French open tennis championships.

The stocky American from Miami Beach, Fla., came up with terrific passing shots when the chips were down to earn a 4-6, 7-6, 6-1, 5-7, 6-4 victory and a standing ovation from an estimated 10,000 spectators at the center court of Roland Garros Stadium.

In other play Wednesday, unheralded American John Andrews upset Erik van Dillen, 6-2, 7-5, 0-6, 2-6, 6-2, to advance to the quarterfinals in the women's singles, Chris Evert defeated Japan's Kazuko Sawamatsu, 6-1, 6-1, and Janet Newberry beat Hungary's Eva Szabo, 6-1, 6-2, as each gained the semifinals. Czechoslovakia's Martina Navratilova defeated Donna Ganz of Miami Beach, Fla., 6-1, 6-1, and Russia's Olga Morozova beat Argentina's Raquel Giscafre, 7-5, 6-7, 6-0, to also advance to the semifinals.

Ramirez won last week's Italian tennis championships in his match with Dibbs, each player stuck to his own game plan on the clay court, Ramirez rushing the net and volleying with Dibbs staying back and looking for winning passes or lobs.

But Dibbs showed surprising versatility in serving four aces in the match and regularly scoring points with volleys on his occasional visits to the net.

The 24-year-old Dibbs, who always plays his best on the European circuit, said after the match. "It's the hardest I've had."

He said a key point came in the fifth set when Ramirez had him down 4-0 and had a point to break the American's serve for a 5-0 lead. At that point, Dibbs hit a backhand passing shot down the line for 40-40. He did the same thing on the next point for a 4-4 tie and Ramirez hit a forehand wide to give Dibbs the game.

It was the beginning of the end for the 21-year-old Mexican No. 1, who could not win another game as Dibbs' potent passing shots came alive again.

Andrews' match with van Dillen was postponed Tuesday after four sets. The fifth set was played Wednesday and the strong-starting Andrews, from Marina Del Rey, Calif., won it handily, 6-3, in 30 minutes.

The 23-year-old Andrews, ranked 47th in the United States, stroked the ball steadily from the baseline for a 4-1 lead in the final set over van Dillen, who is ranked 19th among American players.

Van Dillen, 24, was the third American in a row that Andrews has knocked off on his way to the quarterfinals, where he next plays Adriano Panatta of Italy.

Andrews, a pro for one year, said he has never before played so well on clay as in this, his first major tournament.

Miss Evert next plays Miss Morozova.

"I haven't yet played Olga this year," Chris said after beating the bespectacled Japanese girl by driving her all over the court with the patented Evert baseline shots.

Miss Newberry had an easy time with Miss Szabo to gain the semifinals against the second-seeded Miss Navratilova.

Best Hitter Learned Not To Swing For Fences

By DAVE ANDERSON
(c) N.Y. Times News Service

New York — He is baseball's best hitter, but he has never had more than eight home runs in a season. And that's why he is baseball's best hitter.

Rod Carew of the Minnesota Twins understands what most batters never learn — that there is more room to hit the ball inside the fences than beyond them.

Slowly, as it always does for an artist who specializes in the nuances, his prominence has equalled his skill. His style is as subtle as Nolan Ryan's fast ball is explosive, but it is equally effective and more consistent.

Rod Carew was batting .418 before the current series with the New York Yankees at Shea Stadium and the wise men of baseball already have virtually conceded his fifth American League batting title, his fourth in succession.

The pretenders know better than to think their averages will be anywhere near his. Reggie Jackson realized that early last season.

Off to a good start, the Oakland A's slugger was contemplating the possibility of leading the American League in batting average, home runs and runs batted in — what is known as the triple crown.

"You might win two," Carew told him the next time the Twins played the A's, "but forget about the other one."

By the "other one," Carew naturally meant the batting title. HIS batting title. And that night Jackson went hitless.

His average dropped to around .380 while Carew's average remained up around .395.

"I concede," Jackson told him.

Rod Carew is head and shoulders and waist above his competition. His .364 average last season was 45 points ahead of Jorge Orta of the Chicago White Sox, the runner up with .319; his .350 average two years ago was 44 points ahead of George Scott of the Milwaukee Brewers, the runnerup that year with .306; his .400-plus average this season is at least 60 points ahead of his closest pursuers — Fred Lynn of the Boston Red Sox, Mike Hargrove of the Texas Rangers and Thurman Munson of the Yankees.

"Munson's always talking to me, Carew says. "Last week in Minnesota he was saying, 'Where are you going to hit it now?' and 'How do we get you out?' he was asking, 'What am I doing wrong?'"

Munson's questions were understandable. In a five-game span that included three against the Yankees last week, the 30-year-old second baseman batted .833 in 18 at bats with 15 hits (11 singles, one double, three home runs), scored 11 runs, batted in nine runs and stole two bases.

That streak lifted his average from .367 to .425 and had American League pitchers talking to themselves.

"Pitchers never say much to me," he says, "except Bill Lee of the Red Sox, but he talks to everybody. Not politely, either."

Even with six homers this season, the 6-4 185-pound

Carew isn't likely to consider himself a slugger. He made that mistake once before.

"Going into the last month of the 1968 season I was batting .310, but I started going for the fences," he recalls.

"I was jerking my head when I swung, and swinging too hard and I finished with a .273 average. The next year Billy Martin (then the Twins manager) told me, 'Just hit the ball some place and get on base, steal bases and score runs—that's your job.'"

"Ever since then I've never thought about hitting home runs. When one develops, fine but I don't disrupt my swing to hit home runs. Any time that I find myself jerking my head, I take extra batting practice. I take a lot of extra batting practice. Maybe twice a week."

Hitting a baseball isn't an exact science, but most major leaguers can't be bothered with extra batting practice.

"We've got quite a few guys who don't do it," the articulate Panamanian says. "I've disciplined myself to know what I can do with the bat. I know who I am and I know who I'm not. It's not a shame to go to the opposite field. It's not a shame to lay a bunt down."

Most major leaguers have only one batting stance. Rod Carew has four that vary depending on the pitcher.

"One, a square stance with my legs closed that's good against a good right-handed curve ball pitcher like Catfish Hunter," he says.

"Two, a partially open stance with my right foot slightly back. Three, a wide open stance with my right foot so far back I'm actually facing the pitcher.

"And four, an open stance with me crouched and leaning back good against Nolan Ryan or anybody with good hard stuff. With some pitchers I change the stance depending on the count of the situation. I can wait as late as when he brings his hands above his head."

Rod Carew has developed another subtle skill that the big swingers are incapable of.

"I foul off pitches I don't like but that I think might be called strikes. Wrist hitters can still get the bat on the ball at the last moment. I've taken the ball out of the catcher's glove sometimes."

It's too early to judge his chances of hitting .400 this season (the last to do that was Ted Williams with .406 in 1941), but it's not too early to appreciate that Rod Carew is a Hall of Fame candidate.

"It's nice for people to say that," he says, "but I don't know what you have to do to get in the Hall of Fame."

Just do what he's doing. In a century of major league baseball, only five players have won more batting titles than Rod Carew has — Ty Cobb with 12, Hank Wagner, eight, Stan Musial and Rogers Hornsby each seven, Ted Williams six. That is Hall of Fame company but it doesn't intimidate Rod Carew.

"I don't know about Cobb," baseball's best hitter says quietly. "But I've got time to catch the others."

Wage Scale Wanted

NEW YORK (AP) — Radical changes bring radical solutions, say the brains of the National Football League, and that's why they claim they might force the players' union to negotiate a wage scale for athletes.

If such an agreement came to pass, the rugged men who play pro football would be working under a union contract similar to that of an electrician or a sanitation man.

Sargent Karch, who runs the group which negotiates labor contracts for the NFL, says the league has had a union wage scale under consideration for some time.

Now that the National Labor Relations Board has ruled that the players must negotiate such a scale if the owners propose one, Karch says strictly defined union wages may be part of any future talks between the league and the NFL Players' Association.

"If that happened, I don't know what the players would do," said Ed Garvey, the union's executive director.

But he must know that players such as Joe Namath would not like making the same money as his pulling guard, or his third-string backup.

Karch says the reason the NFL may propose a union scale is because the players insist that the league's rules which bind them to one team be abolished.

If the players insist on total freedom to move from team to team and to negotiate whatever salary the market will bear, Karch said, then the league is ready to insist that their pay be determined by the same kind of scales which govern the livelihood of policemen and truckers.

The genesis for this latest development in the continuing game of oneupmanship in pro football was management's charge that the union had failed to bargain salaries in good faith.

The Labor Board rejected that charge. But at the same time, the government agency which oversees labor law in this country said any wage proposals made by one side must be negotiated by the other.

So, Karch says the NFL is thinking seriously about union scales.

With the Joe Kapp and John Mackey cases already challenging the league's rules which bind a player to one team, this is simply another of the many NFL battlegrounds which have turned attention from the playing field to the courtroom and the bargaining table.

It's All Outdoors

Little Things Mean A Lot

I was just sitting on the cooler at the campsite recently, watching an ambitious black ant stalking off with a piece of Rice Crispy which had fallen out of my dog's breakfast food bowl when it suddenly hit me. Little things do mean a lot.

When I was a kid, I would have jumped on the ant with both muddy tennis shoes and felt better for chalking up another pest which wouldn't find it's way into the potato salad.

Now, I'm more inclined to sit and watch, thinking how happy that ant's family will be when it pushes, pulls and shoves that piece of Rice Crispy onto the family's picnic table down under. Unless one gets in the potato salad, that is.

But how many of us have abused the little things which make outdoor experiences more of an outdoor experience. A large number, I'll wager.

Fishing is one of the greatest excuses for recognizing these little things I've found. It's been called a lazy man's sport. I hope so and don't aim to change it any.

I'll often catch myself drifting aimlessly away to watch some little bit of wildlife or study a strange tree formation or just gaze in the water instead of concentrating on what I'm originally out fishing for. It makes the trip worthwhile. My silence drives the wife nuts but I enjoy it.

Relaxing Way of Life

It's relaxing to drift in a boat to watch a brood of goslings following momma off the bank to swim away in gliding silence.

It's a treat to be scolded by a pair of red-wing blackbirds while sitting on the bank, apparently too near their nest or favorite perch.

It's always fun to watch schools of tiny fish darting in and out of the weeds in clear, shallow water, searching for food under the leaves or escape paths from the monsters which feed upon them.

Spring and fall are the best times to be lazy, yet alert. Flocks of migrating birds keep you company in or near the water. Upland game moves more freely in search of cover and food in the fall or with love in the air each spring.

If you happen to be in northern Minnesota or Canada, the call of a loon shattering a crisp morning haze across your favorite lake is alone worth the trip. I eat it up.

Fishing sometimes takes a momentary backseat in such cases. After all, fishing is just the excuse for getting out of doors to take notice of all the little things.

It's the little things which make an outing something special. Like the loons up north or the ant with the Rice Crispy, you can associate with the mood and feelings of the moment when you relax and let yourself go with it.

Yep, the little things mean a lot. Have another Rice Crispy, fella. Save me the potato salad.

Beatrice Men Win

BEATRICE, Neb. (AP) — Beatrice will be well represented Thursday in the championship flight semi-finals of the Nebraska Seniors Golf Association Match Play Tournament here.

Women Adopt Bill Of Rights

NEW YORK (AP) — A group of prominent women sports personalities have adopted a 10-point "Bill of Rights" demanding "our equal share in a more equitable sports world."

The resolution calls for a restructuring of ruling sports bodies, such as the International Olympic Committee, the International Lawn Tennis Federation and the various athletic federations which rule world sports. It demands equal representation for women on such bodies, as well as on boards which pick Hall of Fame honorees in various sports.

The resolution goes further to ask that the print media give proper recognition to women and that the TV media judge the competence of women "rather than hiring on the basis of good looks."

It asks that manufacturers of toys and games refrain from appealing to the "so-called masculinity of the toy or game" by eliminating sexist language on the package.

Gladys Heldman of Houston, founder of World Tennis Magazine and mother of pro tennis player Julie Heldman, was one of the women instrumental in drawing up the paper.

Others included Dr. Nell Jackson, former Olympic athlete and assistant director of athletics at Michigan State University; Wilma Heide, former president of the National Organization of Women; Dr. Carole Oglesby, sports study consultant at the U. S. Center for International Women's Year, and leading athletes.

The signers were brought together as sports consultants for the U. S. Center on International Women's Year and the State Department.

"We are placing our Bill of Rights with the State Department and sending copies to all of the ruling organizations and federations as well as the media," Mrs. Heldman said from her home in Houston.

"We hope to reach millions in our move to give women a truly equal opportunity in the world of sports."

Retiring Not For Bryant

Tuscaloosa, Ala. (AP) — Paul "Bear" Bryant, at 60 not only one of the nation's most successful football coaches but also one of the wealthiest, was asked if he has any retirement plans.

"I'm certainly not setting my date," the Alabama coach said. "What would I do if I did? I'd have to do something to keep busy."

"Besides, I'm not old enough to draw Social Security."

Chambers: 'Not Guilty' Of Speeding

Omaha (UPI) — State Sen. Ernest Chambers pleaded innocent in Municipal Court Wednesday to a speeding charge and requested a trial.

Judge A.Q. Wolfe set the trial date for June 30. A little more than one month ago, Chambers was given a ticket for speeding while returning to Omaha from the Legislature. He was stopped on the interstate on Leavenworth St. in Omaha and was charged with traveling 74 miles an hour in a 55 mile an hour zone.

Chambers has argued the federal government does not have the authority to legislate in purely state affairs, such as highway speed limits, and the state cannot delegate power to the President or Congress to legislate for the state but said this is what has happened in connection with allowable road speeds.

According to Chambers, "I do have an understanding of what words mean and I looked at the 10th Amendment and it says any power not granted to the federal government is reserved to the states."

The original owner, Suzanne Edgerton of Omaha, went to the shelter two days later. When she couldn't get the dog back, Miss Edgerton sued the society for Washington (UPI) — A House subcommittee recommended Wednesday that Congress restore citizenship to Confederate Gen. Robert E. Lee and end his 110 years in the limbo of men without a country.

The 3-1 subcommittee vote moved Congress to within one step of final action on an issue that somehow got lost in the mists of time, and was then shunted aside and ignored until it vanished in the dusty archives of Washington.

Robert E. Lee

"This is a good example of bureaucratic delay," Rep. Hamilton Fish, R-N.Y., said after a judiciary subcommittee of which he is a member voted in favor of restoring Lee posthumously to full citizenship.

"We are talking about 110 years."

The Senate approved Lee's ancient and long-forgotten request for pardon and citizenship April 10. The petition now needs approval by two-thirds vote of the House in order to take effect.

Lee, the very symbol of Southern gallantry and Confederate commander at such historic battles as Bull Run and Gettysburg, began his quest for restored citizenship two months after he surrendered the confederacy to Gen. Ulysses S. Grant at Appomattox Court House in April 1865.

Lee applied for pardon and citizenship on June 13 that year, only to learn that the U.S. government was demanding an oath of allegiance as a condition for considering such requests from Southern officers.

He took such an oath before a notary public in Lexington, Va., Oct. 2, 1865 — the very day he was inaugurated in Lexington as president of Washington College.

The college is now Washington and Lee University and Lee is buried there, idolized and venerated as one of the great statesmen and commanders of the South — but still an official outcast in his own nation.

His petition for citizenship went ignored and finally sank entirely out of sight and out of official mind in a Washington filing cabinet.

When he died in 1870, the general was the only member of the Lee family whose petition for restoration to citizenship had been ignored.

He had spent his final years urging Southerners to heal the wounds of the past and work for the unity of the nation.

President Andrew Johnson, who until 1868 had the power to issue Civil War pardons and restorations of citizenship, apparently never received the oath of allegiance Lee mailed to him from Lexington.

The 14th Amendment to the Constitution changed the system in 1868 and empowered Congress to pardon disenfranchised officers of rebellions by a two-thirds vote of each house. No presidential approval is necessary.

But Lee's petition — perhaps deliberately ignored in the partisan politics of Civil War Reconstruction — was not rediscovered until 1971, when a historian found it among other Civil War papers in the National Archives.

There has never been an official explanation as to how it was lost all those years.

The lone dissenter in Wednesday's subcommittee vote was Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., who attempted to make the Lee bill a vehicle for general amnesty for Vietnam war resisters.
